Collecting is strong for Bionic Woman memorabilia

BY KELLY J. SULLIVAN

Imaginations swirled in 1972 when the novel "Cyborg" was released by author Martin Caiden. The book centered on a man named Steve Austin, an astronaut who was rebuilt with robotic parts after being seriously injured during a NASA test flight crash. Screenwriter Kenneth Culver Johnson decided to adapt the book into the television se-ries "The Six-Million Dollar Man," which began airing on ABC in 1973. Audiences embraced the show – as well as a scientific concept that would only remain fictional for a few more decades.

During a 1975 episode of the show, Austin was reunited with his high school sweetheart – a professional tennis player named Jaime Sommers – played by American actress Lindsay Wagner. In the midst of rekindling their ro-mance, Sommers suffered near-fatal injuries during a sky-diving incident in which her parachute malfunctioned and she plummeted to the ground. Austin implored the doctors who saved his life to also save the life of Sommers through the use of their bionic implants. Wagner's character was such a hit with fans of the show that Johnson de-cided to create a spin-off for her to star in.

"The Bionic Woman" premiered in January of 1976 on ABC, and ran until May 1977. Four months later, it was picked up by NBC and ran until May 1978. As the first female cyborg – a being consisting of both human and ro-botic body parts – Jaime Sommers was assigned to help carry out spy missions for the Office of Scientific Intelli-gence, per the agreement Austin made with that organization while pleading for her life to be saved.

Sommers' new abilities gave her leverage as a spy. Cybernetic implants in one of her ears allowed her to detect sounds at frequencies which humans cannot hear, and to pick up sounds from a great distance. Her right arm, which had been implanted with robotic features, gave her strength enough to bend steal, while both of her legs contained bionic components that enabled her to run over 60 miles per hour, and jump incredible distances. When not on spy missions, Sommers worked as a teacher at a military base. In 1977, 28-year-old Wagner won an Emmy Award for Outstanding Lead Actress in a Dramatic Role for her portrayal of Sommers.

Having worked as a model before becoming an actress in 1971, Wagner had appeared in television shows such as the crime drama series "Adam-12" and the medical drama series "Marcus Welby, M.D." When ratings for "The Bionic Woman" began to fall and the series was ultimately cancelled, Wagner continued her television career in a variety of shows, including the action-adventure series "The Fall Guy" and the sitcom "Kate & Allie." In the years that followed "The Bionic Woman," three television movies based on the series were released. "The Return of the Six Million Dollar Man and the Bionic Woman" aired in 1987, followed by "Bionic Showdown: The Six Million Dollar Man and the Bionic Woman" in 1989, and "Bionic Ever After?" in 1994.

While Jaime Sommers was at the height of her races and rescues, adventurous missions and dangerous mandates, the American toy company Kenner Products successfully cashed in on the show's

Americana Auctions ends 40-year run with holiday themed event

By Richard Junger

GRAND LEDGE, Mich. — Glen Rairigh started his career as a social services worker, but the chant of the auctioneer slowly lured him into the antiques and auction business, especially selling holiday-related items.

In late October, Rairigh and his wife Wendy, ended their 40 year run as Americana Auctions with a closeout live auction in Grand Ledge, Mich.

The top seller was a non-holiday item. A Mechanical Clockwork Juggling Dog Nodder automaton had no maker's mark, but at 27-inches in height it was a good catch at $1,650. The colorful clockwork wound juggling poodle dog was dressed in a red top hat, blue jacket, and red trousers with a prominent windup key. In his hands he tossed three soft juggling balls, maybe as homage to a circus.

An only slightly shorter all-white Father Christmas figure was hammered at $950. His stern face, hooded winter coat, and carrying a bundle of kindling wood and cone with treats suggested a German "Belsnickel".

A Beaux-Arts and Art Nouveau-influenced two-bulb bronze electric lamp was sold for $550. The two art glass shades were signed Steuben, likely made of either their Gold Aurene or Calcite glass. A nicely symmetrical diamond-shaped panel in the bronze base had either a shell or mosaic inlay, suggesting but not identified as a Tiffany Studios base.

A rare 19-inch Pairpoint reverse-painted glass shade lamp reached $525. The Massachusetts-based Pairpoint company produced reverse-painted lamps between 1905 and 1925 dating this piece. This lamp's artists created a colorful autumn scene on curved glass.

Goose feather Christmas trees were a latter 19th-century German tradition in which craftsmen dyed feathers green to simulate needles, then wrapped or secured them around wire branches. The branches were twisted around a green wooden pole and inserted into a wooden trunk base, frequently covered with brown paper to resemble bark.

Above: Nicknamed Bad Santa, this poor fellow sold for $100. In contrast to the Belsnickels, Bad Santa had the common mid-century accoutrements of red suit, black belt, white trim, and eyes that once lighted.

Two examples standing 50 and 53 inches tall brought $500 and $300. Popular in the 1920s, their German makers even sold them through the Montgomery Ward department store.

A 21-inch feather tree mounted in a folk-art "memory jar" sold for $125. The jar had buttons and other personal keepsake items pressed into a plaster or putty exterior, perhaps as a memorial to a loved one.

Another Belsnickel candy container sold for $500. Unlike the larger, fabric-clothed Father Christmas, this

Michigan Antiques Festival to host Kalamazoo indoor show Nov. 14-15

By Richard Junger

KALAMAZOO, Mich. — A well-known eastern Michigan antique show owner will make a western Michigan debut with the Kalamazoo Vintage Market at the Kalamazoo Expo Center, Nov. 14-15.

Michigan Antiques Festivals has operated the well-known Midland Antique Festival since 1968 and the Davisburg Antique Festival since 2014. Both shows are among the largest in Michigan and draw dealers and shoppers from several surrounding states.

"Chicago, Grand Rapids, all these areas are looking for some place to show their wares and shop," festival director Mathew Edens said. "They don't want to be in a small show, they're looking for someone to put on a large show."

Marketing Director David Edens said their festivals have attracted 130,000 Facebook followers and they have been asked more times than he can count, "Hey, why don't you guys do something on the west side of the state?"

"Because we're the Michigan Antiques Festival they feel we're leaving out the entire west coast of Michigan," he said. "We're so busy with our spring, summer, and fall events that trying to put some more shows in our off season gives us another opportunity for our dealers."

The Edens are hoping to attract Chicago-area dealers and buyers interested in the western Michigan market. At least two western Michigan shows that were well-advertised in the Chicago market for many years disappeared around the time of the pandemic.

"There really are a lot of antiques and vintage dealers [in Chicago] who are looking for a place to sell," Matthew said. "I think Kalamazoo will be an easy drive for them."

The Edens are expecting about 200 dealers for the indoor show, more with last minute additions. The Kalamazoo show is also calling itself the "Kalamazoo Vintage Market by Michigan Antiques Festivals" to attract younger dealers and buyers, the Edens said.

"The dealers are mostly antiques but some dealers will feature vintage items smaller figure had a molded composition body, hand-painted facial features, and black boots emerging from a snow-covered base. German makers frequently dusted such figures with mica flakes to imitate the wintery sparkle of snow, a decorative technique appealing to today's collectors.

A cobalt-blue stoneware jug in near perfect condition sold for $400. Perhaps marked "C. Thorp – Mogadore Ohio", it featured a design that could have been a snake or a highly-stylized floral design.

A wide variety of Halloween pieces were offered just days before that holiday. Top sellers were a pair of larger paper jack-o-lanterns that were hammered at $375 and a smaller set at $275. Their makers used recycled cardboard to create pumpkin halves, painted them orange, and glued them together. Their theatrical-style appearances were more funny than frightful. Many were designed to hold candles, with translucent tissue-paper or printed-paper inserts behind the eyes, nose and mouth to mask a flame. When illuminated, the faces glowed. Few examples with their tissue paper remain.

A Lundberg Studios blue Van Gogh Sunset art glass boudoir lamp sold for $350. Lundberg, who helped found a California glass studio in 1973, was known for intricate handmade glass, including decorative work influenced by the Art Nouveau movement. A gold Stephen Lundberg iridescent art-glass Lava vase sold for $225 while a white version went for $190. The white and gold vases featured raised, swirling decoration identified as his Lava design, in the same style as the lamp.

An absentee buyer paid $100 for what could only be described as a Bad Santa. The bedraggled 26-inch Claus had electric light bulb eyes that didn't work. With his clothing he probably dated to the 1940s or 1950s, perhaps made in the shop of the Harold Gale Santa Co. The electrical novelty recalled an era when manufacturers were adding lighting and movement to Christmas decorations and commercial displays.

Above: A smaller Belsnickel candy container sold for $500. The blue eyes, pronounced wrinkles, and rather severe expression were characteristic of the German Belsnickel.

Above: All-white Belsnickel Father Christmas figure sold for $950. Dating from 1870 to World War I, many were papier-mache or composition and had hollow sections for holding candy.

Rairigh and his wife are uncertain about their future. While Americana will not be conducting any future in-person auctions, Rairigh said that an online version "in maybe a year or so" might be a possibility. Check back at americanaauctions.com

It is time to talk turkey; or at least talk turkey platters

Vintage Style

By Barbara Beem

By now, I'm beginning to wonder if there is anything that my friend Jimmie Bucci does not collect. And I bet that readers of AntiqueWeek are probably thinking the same thing. That said, why would it be any different at Thanksgiving time? While the rest of us are dithering over the perfect seating arrangement, not to mention making certain that everyone's favorite dish is on the holiday table, Jimmie has other things on his mind. Even though he is the president of the Vintage Tablecloth Lovers Club, the Boston-area resident understands that ensuring the ideal holiday meal requires more than setting a beautiful table with vintage linens.

Let's talk turkey, turkey platters, that is. Because yes, as it happens, Jimmie has a collection of these single-use pieces of table service from which to choose. How, when, and where Jimmie started collecting turkey platters, he said, "I don't know. I just started going to antique stores and finding them for as little as $5." Just saying, I totally understand the initial appeal. When you're cruising the aisles of a flea market or antique mall, what's five bucks for something fun?

But Jimmie being Jimmie couldn't resist picking up more examples. Suffice it to say that this friend of "Vintage Style" now finds himself with approximately 20 turkey platters.

Before going further, maybe we should define our terms, so I asked the critical question: "What makes a turkey platter a 'turkey platter?'" And the obvious answer is that it's any large platter that bears the image of a turkey. That said, Jimmie added that turkey platters are often decorated with cornucopias, pumpkins, or a variety of squashes as well. Some of them have a 3-D quality to them. In addition to ceramic platters, there are those made of enamel ware. And even though the earliest celebration of Thanksgiving was in Massachusetts, some of these platters seem to exhibit a Pennsylvania German theme.

As for the history of this collecting category, it's not clear when turkey platters were first produced. Jimmie suggested that it might have been in the 1920s or 1930s. Today, they're the perfect addition for those who enjoy setting a dinner table that has a vintage feel. Think Norman Rockwell.

There is an obvious downside to turkey platters that makes collecting them a bit tricky. As Jimmie noted, turkey platters are bulky and not all that easy to store. Plus they're heavy. Stashing them in upper kitchen cabinets is not always possible because the platters are often too wide to fit on a kitchen shelf. Not a problem for Jimmie. "We have two boxes downstairs."

One other downside: Collecting turkey platters is a solitary pursuit. There does not appear to be a formal club for turkey platter collectors. Yet.

As for how many turkey platters a household really needs, that depends. For those only owning platters that they intend to use once a year, two is a good number, Jimmie suggested: one to display the whole bird and another for serving sliced meat and maybe accompanying side dishes. He reminded us that Thanksgiving is not the only holiday where turkey is the main course; turkey platters also have a place at many Christmas dinner tables. And because Jimmie enjoys setting up holiday tableaux in his home, turkey platters are an attractive part of his displays.

Finally, Jimmie noted that he has never come across a turkey platter that he would characterize as "bizarre." Well, almost never. There's that orange hard-plastic turkey platter that he just had to have. And, as it happens, it might very well be his favorite.

So what am I thankful for this year? Among my many blessings is being a member of a community that embraces vintage style. And if you feel the same way, or have a story about a unique collection you'd like to share, let me know. VintageStyleAW@gmail.com like clothing," according to Mathew. "We get better Google results when we use both buckets, antiques and vintage. Why not do that with Kalamazoo name?"

While the Edens like to emphasize that their dealers have a little bit of everything so that there is always something for everyone, Mathew said that they are looking at a holiday-kickoff theme for this show.

"Everyone has someone who is hard to shop for in their family," he said, "and if you don't know what to buy that person, come to the show and I promise you'll find something that reminds you of Aunt Linda or Grandma and they'll have to have that item."

The Edens are hoping to attract the attention of the 20- to-40 year old demographic in particular, through online digital and social media advertising as well as traditional print, radio, and TV.

"Our social media presence is much stronger than a lot of other antiques shows around the nation," David said. "Our focus online and working with content creators is what gives us an edge to bring larger crowds in."

For instance, there will be several "Whatnot" shoppers at the show on Saturday to generate interest among younger shoppers and sell a couple items to online buyers. For the uninitiated, Whatnot is a live online shopping platform where sellers showcase merchandise in video feeds while viewers bid in real-time auctions.

"You will see people wearing Whatnot t-shirts and they will be coming around with their phones doing livestream auctions while the event is going on," Mathew said. "That's going to be something new and exciting."

"Our web exposure from [a similar event at Davisburg last month] was fantastic and brought in a lot of new shoppers," David said. "Now they want to start doing that at all our shows. It brought close to $20,000 in sales at Davisburg."

"You have to change in order to hit the younger generations," David said. "You have to think the younger crowds aren't picking up the newspaper and reading print ads. It's the fact of the thing."

"Our classic dealers will be there. The professionals who have been doing this for years, but we're also bringing in younger dealers, those who have come in since Covid. Now the younger dealers are getting activated and learning that they can make a living at this too," Mathew said.

Michigan Antiques Festival began in Midland in 1968 as operated by Hugh and Bea Smith. They had promoted various events around the state before then. Hugh died in 2004, and Bea turned the company over to Mathew and David Edens' mother Lori, who had worked with them. Mathew and David have been involved for more than 20 years.

Admission will be $10 for both days, free for children under 12. Saturday, Nov. 14, hours will be 8 am to 5 pm and Sunday, Nov. 15, 9 am to 3 pm. Parking at the Kalamazoo County Expo Center, 2900 Lake St., will be free and food will be available in the building.

Antique radio enthusiasts were tuned in for the 2026 RadioFallFest

By William Flood

DAVIDSONVILLE, Md. — Under crisp, clear skies on Sunday, Oct. 18, the Mid-Atlantic Antique Radio Club held its annual RadioFallFest Vintage Electronics Expo. As one of the club's largest events, this annual swap meet, flea market, and auction features a broad array of vintage technology ranging from tube radios and antique phonographs to mid-century Hi-Fi gear, and even early computers and classic video games.

The event is organized by the Mid-Atlantic Antique Radio Club (MAARC), which is dedicated to collecting, restoring, and preserving vintage electronics, including radios, television sets, and tube-based audio gear. According to MAARC President Dave Rossetti, the hobby and popular event continue to evolve. "Although antique radios are not nearly as popular now as they were in the 1990s," Rossetti noted, "the vintage electronics hobby, which includes vintage audio, ham radio gear, and early computers, is still alive and well."

The expo takes place at the Davidsonville Family Recreation Center, a former classified Cold War-era Nike missile control station. For vintage electronics enthusiasts, the venue, with its low-slung military buildings and concrete radar pads that once housed vacuum-tube computers for Washington's defensive network, provides an enticing backdrop for an electronics show.

These days, the property has swapped its military role for community connections, serving as the permanent home of the Anne Arundel County Amateur Radio Club since the 1970s. The site is also home to the Davidsonville Dance Club, now using Ford Hall - the former mess hall - to continue the traditions of ballroom dancing that were once central to postwar social life.

Like the dance club, MAARC utilizes Ford Hall for the show's indoor needs. The surrounding grounds host the tailgating, which begins at 8 a.m. This year, more than two dozen vendors formed a long aisle along the front parking lot, offering everything from inexpensive radio magazines to rare vintage equipment originally used at commercial radio stations. Sellers came mainly from the DC/Maryland/Virginia region, but also from Pennsylvania and even as far away as New York and North Carolina.

The real eye-catchers both indoors and outside were the restored wood cabinet radios that hailed from the "Golden Age of Radio," which spanned the 1920s through 1950s. Both floor and tabletop varieties were available, including the popular "cathedral" and "tombstone" styles, available in restored and restorable condition. One of the vendors, Dan Koczur from Burke, Va., displayed nearly a dozen gleaming, mainly Atwater Kent wood table models. He said it was a MAARC meeting that got him started restoring antique radios. "I got really enamored with Atwater Kents," he explained. He now beautifully restores those, both internally and cosmetically. "I try to restore them to their original condition," which includes tasks like replacing wiring and restuffing original capacitors.

There were also Bakelite radios from the tail end of the Golden Age, plus colorful plastic radios that took Planning a trip? Event Finder can help you locate auctions and shows. All events listed under the Event Finder heading are advertised in this issue of AntiqueWeek. Events are listed by state, then by town with a brief description of the event, the opening date and finally the page number where the ad can be located.

Event Finder is only for advertised events. Auctioneers and show managers who want to be listed in our free calendar listings may continue to do so. Those free listings will be contained in the Auction or Show calendar sections.

While we have taken great care in compiling the information shown here, we strongly urge you to call the auctioneer or show manager listed for the event in case of cancellations or postponements. We also encourage auctioneers and show managers to contact us with any changes to their schedule. AntiqueWeek is not responsible for errors or omissions.

Calendars can also be searched online at www.antiqueweek.com over in the 1960s. At other booths were shortwave sets, and vintage stereo components of various ages and types. Scattered throughout were non-radio items like vintage clocks and test gear, plus parts and accessories like "horn" loudspeakers for the earliest sets, tubes, knobs, and coveted repair manuals.

Vincent Incordona and a friend came all the way from Rochester, N.Y. He said, "If you want to find the good stuff, you have to travel a bit." But, he acknowledged, "Nobody here is really a dealer. We buy and sell stuff and do a lot of trading. Nobody's here to make money." That helps to explain why pricing at the event is so reasonable. On the whole, prices seemed to be about a third of those at a typical antiques event. That included the Philco floor radio at Incordona's space, though a serious restoration project, was only $15.

By 11 a.m., attention started to shift to the "walkaround" auction where guests and fellow dealers could bid on everything from boxes of parts to restorable radios. One dealer humorously said, "That's where we sell all our junk." At 12:30, the main auction began inside Ford Hall, where aisles of tables typically held the better offerings. Those lots included everything from rare tubes needed for restorations to showpiece restored radios.

Above: This unique 1942 Steward Warner Porto Baradio ($150) came complete with its original glassware and manual.

Rossetti said the show is free for both attendees and vendors, and most folks who come do both. To keep everyone fueled through the day, Davidsonville Boy Scout Troop 454 - which also calls the Recreation Center home - sells food, snacks, coffee, and other drinks.

In addition to RadioFallFest, MAARC hosts a three-day event called RadioActivity, typically held in June. It includes an extended flea market, two formal auctions, an old equipment contest, presentations, and a banquet. That event is held at various facilities in the Baltimore/DC area.

For information on RadioFallFest, RadioActivity, or MAARC's monthly meetings (which also include tailgating and auctions), visit: maarc.org

Below: One Virginia dealer brought a carload of fully restored Atwater Kent wood-cabinet radios, with prices starting at just $75.

Guns drew bidder attention at Braun & Helmer

By Karin Milliman

TECUMSEH, Mich. —Braun & Helmer Auction Service recently conducted a fast-paced auction for the Trout family. Several guns attracted most attention.

A Winchester Model 101 twenty-gauge 2 ¾ and 3 inch Japanese over-under double-barrel shotgun with engraving LLN space KODENSHACO drew a lot of attention. It sold for a final bid of $1,300. A German pistol with a wooden grip was from 1939. This one was possibly a Luger. It was sold in a case and brought a high bid of $1,100.

If you have guns of any kind around, you should also have a safe to keep them locked up—two safes

See Braun Helmer Page 17

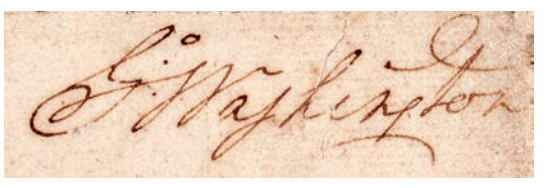
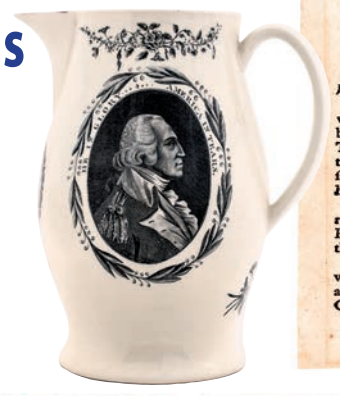
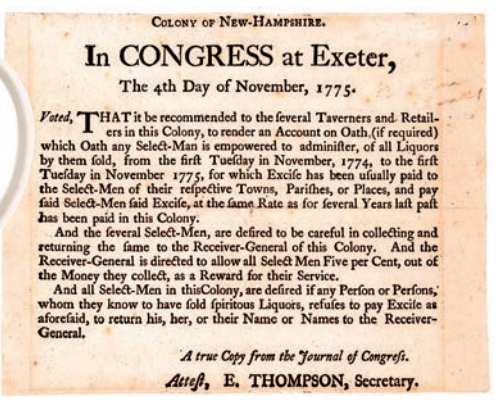
Mount Vernon Aug.t 5.th 1793
Sir
I have some reasons to fear that, by an unlucky mistake, my Letter of the 12.th ult.o (among other things) ordering Insurance on Mr. Custis's Tobacco & mine in the Riviera Jar, was not put into the hands of Capt.n Peterson — for, the Tobacco and order for Insurance on it, will probably go by the same Ship; & therefore again desire (if this Letter gets to hand in time) that Five hundred pounds may be Insured on Mr. Custis's Acc.t (at this Moment I can't ascertain to 75 Hhds.) and one hundred pounds on mine in this Ship. —
Of this date I have drawn upon you for Eight hundred pounds Sterling on Acc.t of Mr. Robt. Carter Nicholas Custis, and in favour of the Rev.d Mr. Boucher (his late Tutor) which please to pay, & place it to the debit of the above Acc.t
I am Sir Your most Obed.t Hble Servt
Go. Washington







COLONY OF NEW-HAMPSHIRE.
In CONGRESS at Exeter,
The 4th Day of November, 1775.
Voted, THAT it be recommended to the several Taverners and Retailers in this Colony, to render an Account on Oath, (if required) which Oath any Select-Man is empowered to administer, of all Liquors by them sold, from the first Tuesday in November, 1774, to the first Tuesday in November 1775, for which Excise has been usually paid to the Select-Men of their respective Towns, Parishes, or Places, and pay said Select-Men said Excise, at the same Rate as for several Years last past has been paid in this Colony.
And the several Select-Men, are desired to be careful in collecting and returning the same to the Receiver-General of this Colony. And the Receiver-General is directed to allow all Select Men Five per Cent, out of the Money they collect, as a Reward for their Service.
And all Select-Men in this Colony, are desired if any Person or Persons, whom they know to have sold spiritous Liquors, refuses to pay Excise as aforesaid, to return his, her, or their Name or Names to the Receiver-General.
A true Copy from the Journal of Congress.
Attest, E. THOMPSON, Secretary.

On the twelfth Day of Sept.r next I promise to pay to Heber Allen or order the Sum of Fifteen Pounds with Interest for the same for value received.
Ira Allen

Thousands of trading cards stolen from truck outside of PSA

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — Police in California are investigating the theft of trading cards worth at least $963,000 that were taken from a FedEx truck parked outside of a company that verifies memorabilia.

The truck was broken into on Oct. 13 near Professional Sports Authenticator, also known as PSA, which authenticates trading cards, autographs, comic books, and other memorabilia and grades their condition, Santa Ana Police Department spokesperson Natalie Garcia said in a news release. Pokémon and sports cards were among the items that were stolen, the release said.

The driver had left the truck unattended, Garcia said in a follow-up email. How long the driver was gone is part of the investigation, she said.

The truck's lock was gone and two pallets were taken, she said. A third pallet was disturbed.

"The estimated value of the stolen cards at the time of the incident was $963,000. However, the exact value of the stolen items has not yet been determined," Garcia said in the news release.

Nick Andrews, a card collector near Boston, told The Associated Press the value of what was taken could be much higher.

PSA's parent company, Collectors, said it has "deactivated the certificates for the stolen cards and notified marketplace partners so they can be on the lookout for rare and serialized items."

The company also said it contacted affected customers directly and arranged for compensation based on fair market value.

Both FedEx and Collectors said they are working with law enforcement.

"The security of our customers' shipments is a top priority," FedEx spokesperson David Westrick said in a statement.

Some people who identified themselves as customers posted online that they got an email from PSA explaining what happened to their cards. They were worried they would never see them again or receive proper compensation.

Andrews, who collects vintage sports and Pokémon cards, told the AP in a phone interview that he was not affected by the theft but has heard from at least two dozen people who were.

He said one person who submitted cards for grading on behalf of several people told him that they lost half a million dollars in declared value.

PSA's parent company did not get into specifics on losses in its statement.

"We understand the impact this has on collectors involved, many of whom see these cards as far more than a financial asset," the statement from Collectors said. "Our team is focused on supporting them. We take this incident seriously, and we will continue working with law enforcement to hold those responsible accountable."

sold at this auction. One was a Frontier, and the other was a Grizzly. Both sold for the same final bid price of $350.

A saber bayonet from 1859 sold for $500. It had a brass-ribbed grip with a blade length of almost 22 inches. It was marked "Ames MFG. CO." It was commonly used throughout the Civil War and was standard issue. This one was in great shape and was still paired with the black leather case.

A 2-by-6-foot single-axle utility trailer came with a helpful landscape ramp. Bids came in quickly for this unit, and it took a high bid of $900 to pull this handy helper home. A Craftsman automatic riding lawn mower had a 46-inch cut. This mower drew a high bid of $175, and the Craftsman lawn sweeper that helped with cleanup behind it, sold for $55.

A Craftsman snowblower may be the best buy at the auction if Michigan gets a lot of snow this winter. The bidding ran all the way to $275 on this helper.

Above: With winter in view, this snowblower drummed up competition and sold for $275.

An Old Town canoe reached $625. A 2700 PSI Greenworks electric power washer was quickly carted off for $95.

A flat of six model airplane engines drew interest. These were all new in the original boxes and the final selling price on these was $450.

For more information call (734) 368-1733.

Above: With bids coming in slowly, this canoe still went to $625 before it sold.

Above: This Craftsman mower probably won't be needed for a few months in Michigan, but it still sold for $175.

Above: From the Civil War era, this bayonet sold for $500.

Below: Selling for $900 and ready to help with the workload, this trailer had a landscape tailgate to make the job easier.

Please report late delivery

AntiqueWeek strives to provide customers with the best delivery possible. Recently, many of our delivery areas have been experiencing late delivery of the paper. AntiqueWeek's late delivery staff has been working closely with USPS to ensure you receive your paper on time, every time. If your paper is not delivered by the issue date, please let us know.

These areas experienced multiple reports of late deliveries during the week of 09/29/2026: Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania

These States reported single reported of late delivery for the same week: Delaware, Florida, Maryland, Missouri, North Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia

Our staff members will continue to address the late delivery reports we receive. We are constantly striving to rectify the late delivery problem. Please call our customer care center at (800) 876-5133 or e-mail Kphipps@midcountrymedia.com or Skopp@midcountrymedia.com to report late delivery in your area.

Please, also contact USPS at 1-800-ASK-USPS or 1-800-275-8777

If you are experiencing consistent late delivery of all mail, we are encouraging you to reach out to your State Representatives to report the ongoing problems with late mail delivery in your area.

While we agree that the physical copy of the paper is the top priority, we do want to remind everyone that in the event your paper does not arrive by the issue date, the current issue is available to view on the website www.AntiqueWeek.com. The online issue is free to subscribers and totally keyword searchable. Thank you for your continued patience & support as we work through the issues with USPS.

The Bionic Woman

popularity. In 1977, they manu-factured and released The Bionic Woman Styling Boutique which allowed children to "create new hairstyles for Jaime Sommers." The 11-inch-tall styling head came with a variety of make-up, including blush and eye shadow, false eyelashes, curlers and a comb.

That same year, Kenner brought out The Bionic Woman Play-Doh Action Play Set, priced at $3.50; as well as The Bionic Bike – a steerable, ride-on bike made for ages two to five, The Bionic Woman Sports Car which was "de-signed for action-packed bionic adventures"; The Bionic Woman Classroom, which replicated the one Jaime Sommers taught in and included a desk which "flips open for secret viewing of mission assignment"; and The Bionic Woman Carriage House, standing over two feet tall and modeled on the apartment Jaime Sommers resided in on the show. The Bionic Woman Bubblin' Bath 'N Shower was also developed by Kenner that year, an "actual working, bubblin' bath and shower" with "assembly required." The product was never marketed, however.

Most of "The Bionic Woman" toys manufactured were geared toward children aged five years and up. A 12-inch-tall Jaime Sommers doll put out by Kenner came with numerous wardrobe selections and fun accessories. A Bionic Cycle, priced at $5.97, came with a poseable Jaime Sommers figurine. The inflatable, 17-inch tall Bionic Wom-an Dome House was "where Jaime Sommers goes for days of fun!"

Today, collectors of "The Bionic Woman" memorabilia can expect to pay about $30 for a doll in good condition, and several hundred for one in an unopened box. The Bionic Woman board game manufactured by Parker Brothers can be found for around $25 to $50, and The Bionic Beauty Salon for between $30 and $140. A Bionic Wom-an lunch box and thermos typically sells for between $75 and $300.

Wagner – who was successfully able to portray a leading female without drawing audiences through typical femi-nine wiles or the wearing of skimpy clothes – was paid $500,000 per year for starring in the show, along with 12.5 percent royalties from the sale of "The Bionic Woman" merchandise. Luckily for all involved, sales were high.

"Kids who watched the show also wanted the toys, and if you had the toys, you didn't want to miss an episode," said James Sherrard, a first-generation fan of the show and creator of the long-running website The Bionic Woman Files.

"In 1998, The Bionic Woman Files website went live," Sherrard said. "And over the years it has grown and ex-panded and become a resource for production and behind-the-scenes information, along with some rare marketing advertisements."

The Bionic Woman Files includes photographs of various items within Sherrard's collection. "I had many Bionic toys and collectibles as a child," he said. "My collection has grown to include production materials, props and wardrobe." He said that his favorite item is the Jaime Sommers' Schoolhouse, produced by Denys Fisher. "This play set for the action figure was produced exclusively in the United Kingdom," he said, making it an extreme rar-ity.

"When the Bionic Woman was introduced, she had a built-in audience from The Six-Million Dollar Man series," Sherrard said. "But the series quickly built a following all its own. Today, it's exciting to see a new generation of fans discover the series through home video and streaming. The series did an amazing job making us believe in the wonders of bionics, even if the inside of their limbs looked like the workings of a transistor radio. There is no doubt that the show brought much needed attention to the research being done at the time."

Sherrard – who has contributed to many Bionic projects over the years – including providing information, bonus materials and episode commentaries for Bionic books, DVD and Blu-ray releases – released his own book "Lind-say Wagner – The Works: A Career Reference Guide" in 2023.
