Vintage cards can be the perfect way to say 'Happy Birthday'

BY DONALD-BRIAN JOHNSON

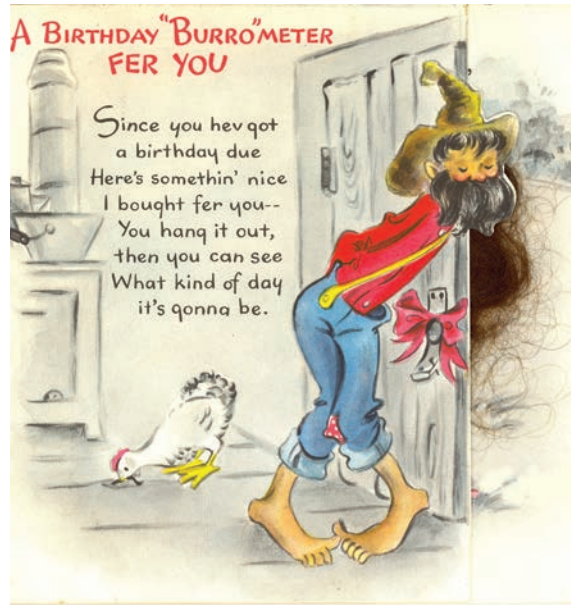

"Joyeux Anniversaire". . . "Lang zal hij/zig leven". . . "Zum Geburtstag Viel Glück". . .

"Sto lat". . . "Zhu ni sheng ri kuai le". Whether in French, Dutch, German, Polish, or Mandarin Chinese, the sentiments remain pretty much the same: "Happy Birthday to You!" With very few exceptions, birthdays are joyously celebrated around the globe. And well they should be. After all, when else do you get a day's worth, (or a week's worth, or even a month's worth, depending on how effectively you milk it), of effusive good wishes just for being you?

Cards are the most prevalent means of commemorating birthdays, and the general tradition of card exchange has its roots in the distant past. In ancient Egypt, good wishes were scraped on papyrus; in imperial China, hand-lettered greetings were the custom. During the centuries that followed, well-wishers continued to rely on similar meticulous means of handicraft. Such options were both expensive and time-consuming, limiting the number of cards that could realistically be produced.

With the development of lithography in the 19th century, recognizing notable occasions with a card became both more feasible and more affordable. The refinement of commercial printing in the early 1900s finally put what Hallmark enshrined as "caring enough to send the very best" within the economic range of one and all. Also playing an important role in greeting card growth: affordable postage, which meant that even those too cash-strapped to spring for a gift could at least send some form of birthday remembrance. In 19th-century England, sending a birthday card had been seen as a form of apology. The ideal was to extend birthday wishes in person; failing that, a card was "the next-best thing." Now, rather than serving as an apology, a birthday card often served as a gift itself.

By the 1930s, the development of color lithography, as well as the proliferation of other holidays in need of recognition (Valentine's Day, Mother's Day, Father's Day, Easter, anniversaries, and almost every other celebratory day imaginable), saw the greeting card industry growing by leaps and bounds. Birthdays, however, still led the parade.

Birthday card themes and trends reflect the times. In the 1940s, the height of high humor could be found in a card depicting a denture-wearing hayseed (the oversized teeth were a plastic insert). The card legend: "It's

Russell Springs Antique Mall closing; selling collections at auction

BY ERIC C. RODENBERG

RUSSELL SPRINGS, Ky. — Neatly tucked within the southern hills of south Kentucky, the Russell Springs Antique Mall was one of those places an avid antiquer wouldn't tell his neighbor antiquer about. Thing is, though, he probably already knew about the spot.

Out-of-the-way from the hustling, bustling crowds; but located at the Gateway to Lake Cumberland, people from all over the country have kicked around inside the Russell Antique Store.

"The Russell" was founded by David and Linda Stephens, opening in 1991 after David retired. David had been puttering around with antiques ever since he was working for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) in Texas. As a chemistry/biology researcher he was promoted to a position on a New York City project.

Predictably the boy from Kentucky wasn't pleased with the ambiance of the city, and he was back in no time at Russell Springs. From there, he changed his career to education, taught at several area schools and ended up finishing a 5-year professional tenure as a Superintendent.

In the meantime, David was becoming more interested

The dining room (and its table) is making a comeback

Remember how we used to dread holiday dinners with buffoonish uncles and crazy aunts? For that matter, remember family get-togethers? It's been a while. So when I saw "The Dining Room Is Back" in a recent issue of "The Washington Post Magazine," my curiosity was piqued. Putting the Sunday crossword puzzle on "hold," I turned to the cover story, which began by proclaiming that the dining room can be "a multipurpose space — and during the pandemic, it made a comeback."

I have never considered the dining room to be dead. I love the mahogany Berkey & Gay table that, for nearly 40 years, has seen numerous holiday celebrations and birthday bashes, grand dinner parties and lovely quiet meals. And that does not begin to take into consideration the countless "AntiqueWeek" features and columns written upon it. (How this gem came into my possession is a story for another time.) Right now, it's being pressed into service to hold an in-progress jigsaw puzzle.

I continued reading. "The formal dining room, long considered a symbol of wealth and privilege, has been the subject of much debate over the past 30 years." But although the dining room was sometimes considered a "relic of a bygone era," these days, it would seem that once again it is becoming a "family hub."

I decided it was time to get a professional opinion, so I caught up with Keith Winkler, my reliable source at Replacements, Ltd., based in Greensboro, N.C. "Did the dining room ever go away?" I asked him. "Is it back?" Talk about your loaded questions.

Keith didn't blink. We discussed how increasingly casual lifestyles had made dining room suites, including china cabinets and their contents, less than desirable. At the same time, with open living spaces, there were fewer walls to display these pieces of furniture. However, the pandemic has changed all of that. These days, separate rooms are once again desirable as family members, spending more time at home, are seeking a bit of privacy.

Designers are once again looking at dining rooms with interest, in light of the fact that the dining room table is the obvious choice for those working remotely. And when it's time for dinner, there is renewed attention being paid to table settings, a fact Keith said is borne out at Replacements, the world's largest retailer of china, crystal, and silverware. During the pandemic, "business improved dramatically" as interest in hearth and home continues to be on the rise. Perhaps replicating the ambience of a fine restaurant makes take-out meals taste better.

Does this mean it's time to set the table like Grandmom once did (not that there's anything wrong with that)? Keith suggested taking inventory of what you have on hand and then "make it your own." A number of mid-century patterns are classic in design, he continued. Mix and match: A complimentary salad plate is an easy (and budget friendly) way to update your table. Or add a striking charger. Colin antiques. In 1988, he launched his first all-out assault on a collecting category – cookie jars. His collection topped out at more than 850 cookie jars and earned him the title as “The Cookie Jar Man.”

David particularly liked the human side of the antique game. Within the 5,000-square-foot shop, he filled it with all manner of antiques and collectibles. The cookie jars (well, most of the cookie jars) weren't for sale. But David loved to find the unique, haggle, swap and cajole with people.

“He had been thinking about doing this for five years,” Linda said. “And it was the perfect idea. David was good with people; he truly loved the business, and it was a thriving business. We had Lake Cumberland and the big Highway 127 yard sale goes through the county. We had many good years.

But now, after David's death about two-and-a-half years ago, the Russell Springs Antique is selling. Piece by piece.

The first sale is currently listed online and is set to conclude on Oct. 12 at 6 p.m. (CDT). There will be three auctions, according to Linda Russell. The second sale is scheduled for Oct. 19-Nov. 2; and the third sale, Nov. 23-Dec. 7. All the sales are being conducted by Golden Rule – Wilson Real Estate and Auctions.

There will be about 700-800 lots at each sale. About 300 of David Stephens' cookie jars will be sold each day. There is also lots of period furniture and accessories, an antique game table, lots of Coca-Cola memorabilia, glassware, old books, art glass, large Life magazine collection, an antique 5-drawer National cash register, and much more.

“We're trying to split it up, so all three sales will be good,” Linda Stephens says. “It's a bittersweet event. I've been running the store the past couple of years, and I can see it is just becoming too much. I have a lot of people come by and say how they'll miss the store, and we met a lot of great people.

“It was a good period of time for us, but now it's time to get some enclosure. There's so many things I want to do, and I want to make every minute count.”

The No. 1 lot on the first sale – a handsome, 1906 (or 1905) National Cash Register has place of honor. “That was always our pride and joy,” said Linda, who rang up sales on the cash register. Selling with the cash register will be the original bill of sale: Made out to W.H. Clark of Louisville, Ky. dated Feb. 6, 1906, and signed by the National Lexington office vendor.

ored stemware is in vogue, he said; consider swapping out a colorless stem for a colored one (although purists might still insist upon a clear glass for wine). Think “upscale modern.”

There does remain the issue of clean-up. But this is less of a problem with a smaller group of people dining together. As for washing silver flatware, Keith explained that it's dishwasher-safe if you don't mix it with other metals. For years, I've avoided using lemon-scented detergents because of their acidic nature (an old hint from Replacements). Add a fresh table runner or tablecloth, colorful placemats or napkins, and you're in business.

Finally, if the dining room table is otherwise occupied, Keith suggested using a cocktail table in the living room, or maybe even taking the meal outdoors, weather permitting (remember, he lives in the South). “But still make it special.”

Above: Layer mismatched china for an updated look sure to brighten spirits. Sales of china, crystal, and silverware are on the rise as the pandemic pointed up the importance of hearth and home.

Below: Thanksgiving is just around the corner. And if a huge family meal is not in your future, that means fewer dishes to wash at the end of the day.

Gilley's Antique Mall gets new owner in Ron Tedrow

By MELISSA GIBSON

PLAINFIELD, Ind. — Gilley's Antique Mall has a new owner. On July 1, real estate investor Ron Tedrow with Century Holdings, LLC. Purchased the business and property from Jeff Hines. The mall has been a fixture in of Plainfield since the late 1980s, offering a wide variety of collectibles, memorabilia and antique items.

"We're thrilled with the way things have started out. We have a great staff that have stayed on and we're full as far as dealer stalls are concerned," Tedrow said. "My son-in-law, Doug Bryant, has had a long-held interest in antiques so when I found out Gilley's was for sale, I immediately thought of him. He's going to manage the business and it's a win/win for us both."

While no interior changes are planned, Tedrow and Bryant hope to remind past and future customers the antique mall is there and ready with a full range of items, including antique, retro, primitive, vintage, collectibles, home décor and repurposed items.

"I grew up in Mooresville and have been coming here for 30 years or so," Bryant said. "Gilley's has been around for a long time, but I'm still surprised by the number of people that come by and say it's the first time they've been here. This is a great place and if it's not broke, don't fix it."

Antique collector Dick Woolsey has been operating a booth from Gilley's since 1991.

"I have five booths and four showcases, so I sell a number of different things," Woolsey said. "I enjoy going to garage sales and auctions and have been doing this for 30 years or so."

Woolsey grew up during the depression, served two active duties with the U.S. Army and after retiring from Allison's, needed a new passion.

"I have had numerous people tell me they've been buying things from my booth for the past 25 years and they know I sell a certain type of antique dishware or the pink rotary phones. I think it brings back memories for people and to me, it's just interesting because I like those old items, a thing of the past," Woolsey said.

He's been shopping and selling at Gilley's long enough to see changes in customer tastes. For example, oak and walnut antique furniture used to be a big thing, but he's noticed it's not as popular with younger generations and now, Woolsey is taking his grandchildren to the antique mall and watching their surprise and interest in the unique finds.

Kyle and Brooke Gentzel know exactly how Woolsey feels when walking the aisles at Gilley's. The pair love antique farmhouse décor and just recently began operating a booth, "The Dwelling Place" in Section 5, Booth E11 but their interest didn't just start there.

"Antiquing was something that we both just loved," said Kyle. "We had a connection over it and started going to Gilley's together. It was like a Saturday date for us."

With their special connection and love for all things antique, Kyle chose to pop the question to Brooke in a booth at their favorite place.

"I got permission to stage the proposal there and the owners at the time were so gracious to accommodate us. We walked down that first aisle and I had all of her family and friends there and got down on one knee," Kyle said.

Once they were married, they began decorating their own home with all the décor they loved and found there was more there than they had room to use.

"We look for anything unique, something you can't just find anywhere and it's fun to be on the hunt," Brooke said. "We've only been selling there since March but it's an important place to us and we knew we wanted to invest in Gilley's."

The couple has always been impressed by the knowledge and friendly faces of the staff.

"I think the heart of Gilley's is the employees. They know you, either because you're a vendor or because you visit often. You instantly feel like family when you walk in, so we're excited to see what Doug will offer to the mall," Brooke said.

For more information, visit <http://gilleysantiquemall.com> or follow the Gilley's Antique Mall Facebook page.

French dolls were the belles of the ball at Pook & Pook auction

CAROLE DEUTSCH

DOWINGTOWN, Pa. — Pook & Pook presented a stellar online only auction on July 28 and 29 that brought impressive prices for a wide diversity of items. Unique objects of high quality characterized the sale that consisted of approximately 1,500 lots. Chief among them was a collection of antique French dolls, three of which achieved the top lots of the entire sale.

The staggering price of $21,402 was realized for a 31-inch tall French Bru Jne bisque doll that carried an estimate of $3,000 to $5,000. The doll had a bisque swivel head and shoulders, fixed blue paperweight eyes, painted eyebrows, a closed mouth, pierced ears, and cork pate. The body was made of kid leather, with molded breasts and lower bisque arms with lower wooden legs. It was inscribed, "BRU Jne 12," retained faint remains of the original label, and the shoes were stamped, "Bebe Jumeau Depose."

According to Jamie Shearer, Vice President, Appraiser & Auctioneer, the doll sold well beyond even the most ambitious house anticipation. "We figured it would bring about $10,000 but a lot of stars aligned for these exceptional dolls. The doll market is generally soft at present but French dolls lead the pack in popularity, as always, and these particular dolls were standouts because they had very nice faces with pleasant, soft expressions, which is what collectors are looking for these days."

An unmarked 26-inch tall French Bru bisque head doll claimed the second highest price of the day outdistancing the high estimate of $1,500, commanding a strong $10,578. It had fixed paperweight eyes, a closed mouth, pierced ears, painted eyebrows, and cork pate. The kid leather body, with bisque lower arms, was dressed in a period outfit with "L. I." marked shoes.

A French bisque socket head and shoulder doll, with fixed blue paperweight eyes, closed mouth, painted eyebrows, pierced ears, and cork pate, but no wig, had a kid leather body that was 25 inches tall. The forehead at the hairline was stamped "Bte S. G. D. G.," the back of the neck was stamped "4," and the shoulder stamped "5." The doll was estimated at $800 to $1,200 but flew past that mark to achieve $8,241.

Apart from the dolls, items of interest that brought outstanding prices in their genre included a set of four 19th century small hand brooms, approximately 15 1/2 inches long. The brooms showed appropriate wear and sold for $2,583, more than ten times the high estimate of $200. Shearer commented that brooms have always been a popular sale item and hand brooms are considered rare.

Below: A carved and painted bird tree, signed and dated by Paul Tyson, brought $2,394, against a $300 to $500 estimate.

Above: An unmarked 26-inch tall French Bru bisque head doll claimed the second highest price of the day, outdistancing the high estimate of $1,500 to achieve a strong $10,578.

Another unusual find that commanded keen bidder attention was a 28-inch-high Victor phonograph, with an oak horn, that soared past the $400 to $600 mark to realize $2,835, despite some losses to the horn. Shearer noted that 80% of the horns on a phonograph are tin, not wood.

A 19 1/2 inch tall carved and painted bird tree by Paul Tyson was signed and dated, "76, #49." It was cataloged as being in very good condition with no apparent damages or repairs and sold for $2,394, outdistancing a $300 to $500 estimate. Paul Tyson (1921- 1984), Pottstown, Pa., was a wood carver who created excellent pieces that rarely come to market.

Furniture included a 76-inch-high oak chiming clock and stand, by G.W. Russell, who worked in Philadelphia, 1831-1850. Chiming clocks differ from tall case clocks in that they are not as tall and are made in two pieces, with the clock mounted on a stand. The clock was in good condition and sold past the high estimate of $1,200, yielding $3,087.

An early 1700s William and Mary turned great chair, constructed from period and non-period elements, had been restored with some newer parts. It was in good condition and brought $3,321 against a high estimate of $500.

Below: A Victor phonograph with an oak horn soared past the $400 to $600 mark, commanding $2,835.

Below: The staggering price of $21,402 was realized for a 31-inch tall French Bru Jne bisque doll that carried an estimate of $3,000 to $5,000.

Above: A French bisque socket head and shoulder doll was estimated at $800 to $1,200 but flew past that mark realizing $8,241.

Below: This chiming clock and stand by G.W. Russell sold past the high estimate of $1,200, yielding $3,087.

Below: An early 1700's William and Mary turned great chair, constructed from period and non-period elements, brought $3,321, against a high estimate of $500.

Below: This set of four 19th century small hand brooms sold for more than ten times past the high estimate of $200 to achieve $2,583.

Graceland contract signed by the King sings a $114,660 tune at auction

PHOENIX, Ariz. – The 1957 contract signed by Elvis Presley and both of his parents for the purchase of the home in Memphis that became known as Graceland soared to $114,660 in an online auction held August 10 by PristineAuction.com, based in Phoenix.

“This auction was certainly one of a kind,” said Jared Kavile the president and founder of PristineAuction.com. “The company is proud to be part of the sale of such an incredible piece of history. The legend of The King will always live on, and Graceland is one of the most famous mansions in the world, visited by millions of people from around the globe. To be part of that is an honor.”

The contract was the actual purchase agreement allowing the Presleys to purchase the property at 3764 Highway 51 in Memphis. It was printed on Virginia Grant Realty Company letterhead and included Virginia Grant’s handwritten agreement, stating the Presleys would trade their property on Audubon Drive in Memphis for $55,000 credit, plus an extra $90,000 to purchase Graceland.

When Elvis was a boy, he told his parents one day he would make a lot of money and take care of them, putting an end to their years of hard work and financial struggles. Buying the Graceland mansion was the fulfillment of that childhood promise.

The custom-framed document, 30 by 34 inches, was dated March 17, 1957. It was signed by Elvis, his parents (Vernon and Gladys) and agent Virginia Grant, who signed her name in red and black ink pen. The $114,660 purchase price included the buyer’s premium. After Presley’s 1977 death, Graceland was named a National Historic Landmark. It opened to the public in 1982.

ATG acquires LiveAuctioneers, expanding its global reach

NEW YORK - LiveAuctioneers, one of North America’s favorite destinations for fine and decorative arts, antiques and luxury goods, has been acquired by Auction Technology Group plc. Following the receipt of final approvals required in order to proceed, ATG expects to complete the acquisition shortly. LiveAuctioneers is currently owned by Cove Hill Partners, a Boston-based, long-term oriented private equity firm that invests in consumer internet and technology businesses.

ATG’s mission is to be a trusted partner to the auction industry as it continues its structural shift to online, driving the appeal of secondhand items and accelerating the growth of the circular economy. The acquisition of LiveAuctioneers demonstrates ATG’s commitment to helping auctioneers build their businesses and compete with global e-commerce giants by enabling them to reach a global pool of bidders, while also providing bidders with access to millions of unique and specialized items.

This transaction will enhance the enlarged group’s offering to auctioneers and bidders across the world. It will enable the thousands of auction houses that run their auctions on LiveAuctioneers to benefit from the ability to list their auctions on ATG’s existing marketplaces and reach a wider audience of buyers of fine art and antiques in the UK and EU. ATG’s existing auctioneer clients will have the option to list on LiveAuctioneers, reaching bidders in North America who annually win more than one million items on LiveAuctioneers.com. The acquisition will also enable ATG to integrate LiveAuctioneers’ easy-to-use payments solution across its global business, significantly simplifying this process for auctioneers and enhancing the buying experience for winners.

Under Cove Hill Partners’ ownership, LiveAuctioneers has seen significant growth in recent years, receiving more than 56 million bidder sessions in 2020. The acquisition will bring an estimated 1,600 auctioneers and 120,000 bidders to ATG’s network, as well as 27,000 auctions per year and 1.3 million lots sold. It will also give the company access to the US art & antiques market – a segment that is twice the size of that of the UK. ATG already has a growing presence in the North American auction industry, selling high-value construction and farm equipment on its online marketplace, Proxibid, and food & beverage plus heavy industrial, metal, and woodworking equipment through its BidSpotter marketplace, as well as providing best-in-class white label services through its subsidiary Auction Mobility.

LiveAuctioneers will continue to operate with its headquarters in New York City and be led by CEO Phil Michaelson. ATG’s existing art and antiques marketplaces are thesaleroom.com, which was founded by ATG in 2006, and German fine art and antiques marketplace lot-tissimo.com, which was acquired by ATG in 2018. The Group also operates four marketplaces in the industrial and commercial sector.

Vintage Cards

knee-slapper had been replaced by sardonic “studio cards” — those long cards with the short punch lines. One studio card example: a front cover illustration of a bucolic hillside. The caption: “Where are you in this picture?” The interior message: “Over the hill!”

For those preferring a softer approach, cards with floral décor, or “Ideals”-like illustrations of rustic scenes, have always remained popular, as have birthday cards directed either toward specific relatives (“Son”; “Wife”), or toward the not-so-specific (“To The Man Who Married My Daughter”). Especially popular today are “handmade” cards, with their straw ties, ransom-note-like irregular lettering on recycled paper stock, watercolor-y illustrations, and other intimations of individual craftsmanship. The message is clear: if not the sender’s, at least someone’s hands worked on these. Also a 21st century hit: those ubiquitous e-cards, often complete with dancing figures and perky music, which make checking your laptop on birthday morning a party all in itself.

Birthday card collectors are particularly drawn to cards from the 1930s through the 1960s, prized for their eye-catching color, novel designs, and innocent sentiments. Always in demand: cards with “extras,” such as glitter, foil, ribbons, or dimensional foldouts. Sometimes the add-on itself is the real draw: a 1939 card by Meryle, for instance, features a removable red Bakelite “Scottie” pin; the pin’s value far outweighs the intrinsic value of the actual card.

Signed and dated cards, especially those with hand-written personal messages, add a human dimension to birthday card collecting, and offer a glimpse into the everyday lives of their long-ago authors. Here’s one from the 1940s:

“Hope your birthday is the happiest. Kind of on pins and needles here. Expect Jimmy’s division was in that invasion of Okinawa. Got a letter from him Saturday. He is so good to write me. Couldn’t make it if he didn’t. I love and miss him so much.”

Of course, the nicest thing about a birthday card collection is that start-up is a snap. Everyone has, at some time or another, received at least one birthday card. Add another, and a collection is born! The national average says each person receives seven cards. Whether heartfelt or humorous, elaborate or e-greeting, birthday cards today remain big business: over two billion are purchased annually in the United States, about 60 percent of all greeting cards sold.

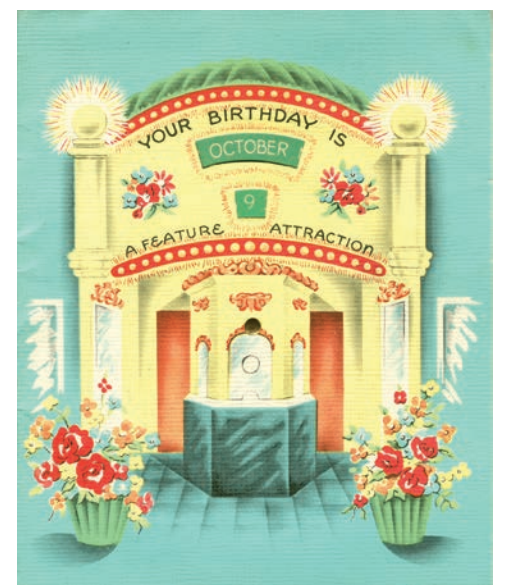

If it’s vintage birthday cards you’re after, you’ll be happy to know that they remain readily available and affordable and can often be found at paper shows and estate sales. Prices range from $1 for simple cards, to $30 for cards with all the elaborate bells and whistles.

Since birthday cards were usually carefully packed away as keepsakes to be treasured, their condition remains surprisingly intact, despite the passage of years. The exception: cards which were glued into scrapbooks. Enjoy these “as is,” without trying to remove them from their books. Any attempt to dissolve the glue would also, in all probability, dissolve the delicate, aged paper. Among the display options for loose cards: binders with clear archival pocket pages, individual frames, or a creative wall montage.

A few birthday points to ponder, while riffling through this year’s batch of cards:

The next time you sing “Happy Birthday To You,” thank Mildred and Patti Hill for changing the words. The schoolteacher sisters originally penned their 1893 chart-topper as “Good Morning, Dear Teacher, Good Morning To You.”

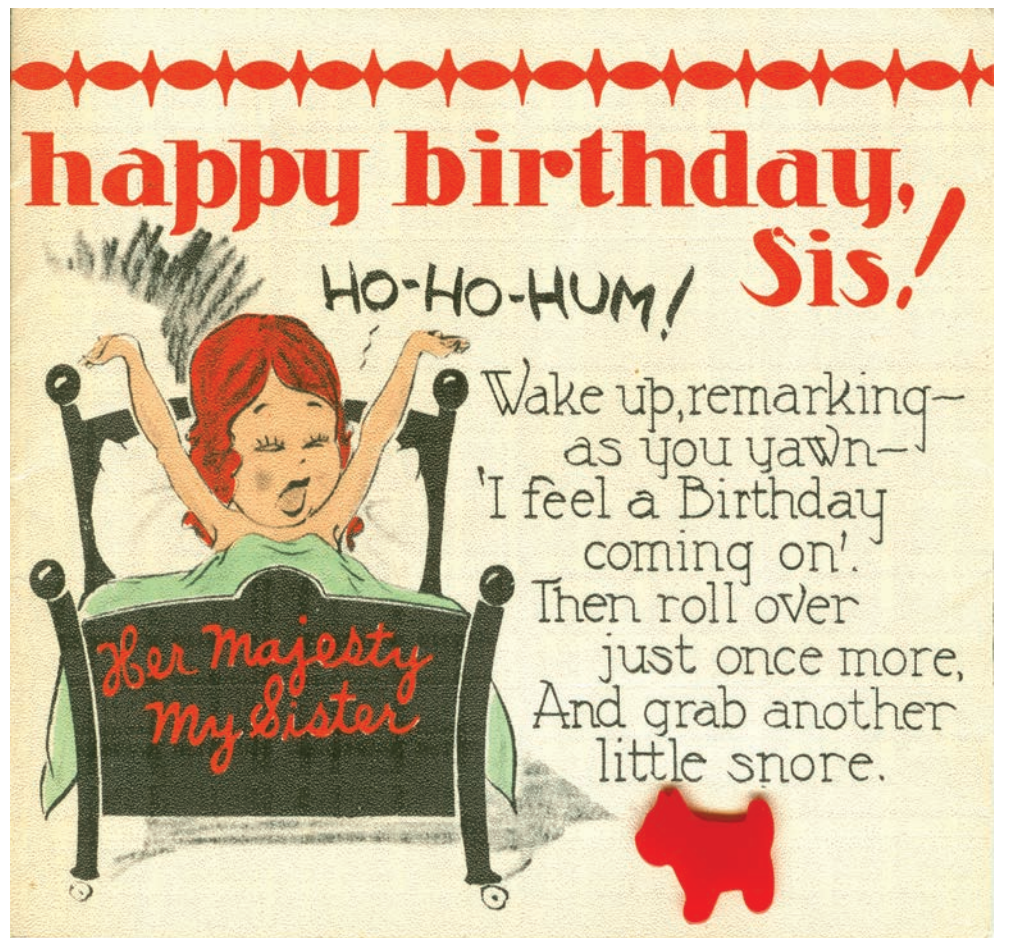

Another “Happy Birthday” first: when Apollo IX astronauts belted out a rendition in 1969, it became the first tune sung in outer space.

In 1989, Fort Payne, Alabama, celebrated its 100th birthday with the “World’s Largest Birthday Cake.” Over 16,000 pounds of icing coated the confection, which weighed in at a whopping 128,238 lbs., 8 oz.

The most common birth date in the United States is Oct. 5; the least common is May 22.

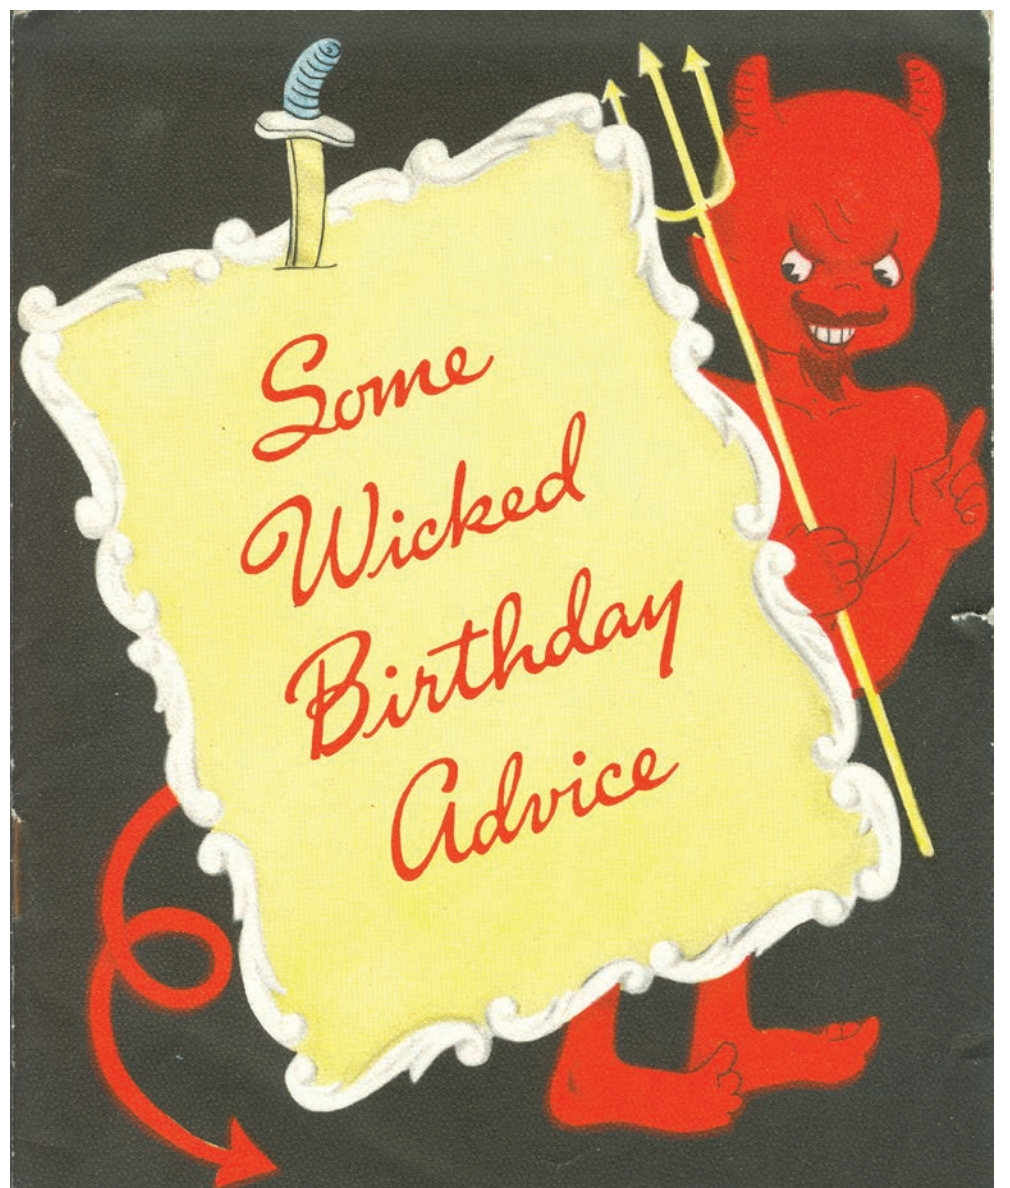

If you’re an average Joe (or Jane), since your last birthday you’ve taken an estimated 15,768,000 breaths. Now, it’s time to take another. Breathe deep, blow out those candles . . . and may all your birthday wishes come true!
