Collecting the music of war and conflict

BY MARTIN STEINER

The reactions to war include patriotism, support programs, family concerns, recognition of leaders and the various military services and individual units. Each of these areas has inspired musical compositions to be created. Families and groups would purchase printed sheet music often with patriotic graphics on the front to play on the family piano, by community bands or sung at schools and churches. The collecting of these song sheets tells the history of America's wars.

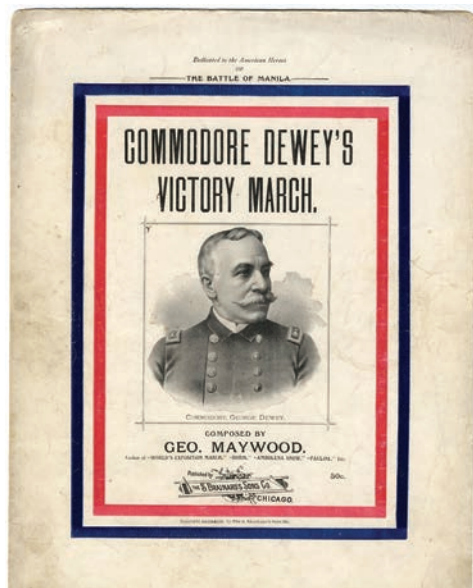

American war music dates back to the French and Indian war when England's world respected armies, especially their officers, made fun and mocked the American colonialist's disheveled and disorganized militia that served with them by singing Yankee Doodle. The implication was that these Yankee simpletons thought they would become stylish simply by sticking a feather in their hair or hat. Among those hearing and observing that activity was a 21 year old serving as a Major with the Virginia Regiment. His name ... George Washington.

As the Declaration of Independence took hold on the colonists and the War of Independence began Yankee Doodle became an American anthem of sorts as a sarcastic rebuke of the British condescending attitude.

Patriotic songs generally used images of our flag, Uncle Sam, the Statue of Liberty or a stylized Miss Liberty. Images to support the war effort include war bonds, food rationing, and sons enlisting. The emotions of war including missing relatives, sweethearts and their communities were expressed in ballads. Famous military leaders including generals and admirals inspired their own group of musical compositions and the various military services, ships and some individual military units had their own official songs.

Simultaneous with the Spanish-American war, player pianos, Edison recorded

World War II Museum brings new chapter to Gettysburg

BY BARBARA MILLER BEEM

GETTYSBURG, Pa. – What began with the search for a missing relative turned into a consuming interest in World War II. And now, some 50 years later, that passion has led to the opening of a new museum in Gettysburg, the “World War II American Experience.”

The town of Gettysburg has long been a destination for historians and Civil War buffs alike. Year round, visitors explore the 6,000-acre battlefield by bus, bike, or car, as well as on foot or on horseback; its 1,400 monuments and markers make it one of the largest collections of outdoor sculpture in the world. Among the attractions are an introductory film narrated by Morgan Freeman, a cyclorama depicting Pickett’s Charge, and the Museum of the American Civil War, which houses an extensive collection of relics. But these days, this south-central Pennsylvania town is also home to a museum and education center that focuses on the world’s largest conflict of the last century.

It was Loni Buck’s uncle whose aircraft was lost at sea while on a mission during World War II. Years later, Loni and husband Frank found themselves caught up in the story. What resulted was a visit to Normandy Beach, which soon grew into regular pilgrimages.

Above: For those engaged in combat during World War II, hopping aboard a Sherman tank involved risk. But visitors to the World War II American Experience can now see what it was like. . .albeit without enemy fire. Images courtesy of World War II American Experience

Not surprisingly, the Gettysburg couple soon found themselves collecting various artifacts from the war. Thanks to the fact that they live on a large farm northwest of the center of Gettysburg, they had plenty of storage space. Meanwhile, as a result of their travels over the years, they met veterans and their families, consequently exchanging information and building friendships. It was not unusual, therefore, for them to welcome visitors to their farm who shared their interest in the war.

Then, in 2019, “the vision came alive,” according to Jody Wilson, speaking for the museum. The Bucks deeded 30 acres of their property to a newly formed non-profit entity, and thus were planted the seeds for the World War II American Experience. Their goal was to share what they had amassed, and at the same time, they hoped to provide others a place to lend or donate artifacts that should not be lost to history.

Today, a 36,000-square-foot structure stands on the grounds, serving as a home base as well as an exhibition center, complete with dioramas. Providing visitors an up-close-and-personal experience are the museum’s many artifacts. Touch, hop aboard, and, in some cases, take a ride.

A glimpse into a 1940s domestic setting provides a look at life on the homefront, which includes a tribute to women who went to work in factories and shipyards (think “Rosie the Riveter”). A call for metal for the war effort resulted in the donation of scrap metal, including pots and pans. Amazingly, the museum has on exhibit some of these items that were once placed at curbside. Noted Wilson, “Everything on exhibit here is original, even scrap.”

Other items lending insight into sacrifices made during the war are personal effects (including letters and diaries), uniforms and hand painted leather jackets, not to mention General Matthew Ridgeway’s foot locker. Meanwhile, where else can you check out two machines that were once used to make dog tags?

But probably providing the biggest “wow” at the museum is its fleet of more than 80 vehicles, all of which are in working order. Among those on exhibit are two Sherman tanks and several ambulances, a half-track and a “massive collection of Jeeps” that

Renowned jewelry author parting with her collection via auction

BY ERIC C. RODENBERG

BLAIRSVILLE, Pa. – As Ronna Aikins once again affirms, the bling, sparkle and flash of vintage jewelry makes today’s tepid offerings nearly pale in comparison.

In 2003, Aikins wrote “Brilliant Rhinestones Vintage & Contemporary Jewelry,” an informative book with more than 750 photographs detailing nearly 1,000 pieces of dazzling jewelry. More importantly, she also described how to distinguish the good from the bad; the valuable from the worthless. The book was a success.

The next year, Collector Books published her “20th Century Costume Jewelry: 1900-1980 Identification and Value Guide.” The book illustrated more than 600 color photos and more than 800 sparkling pieces. Once again, the author went beyond the call of duty with chapters on how to select and wear jewelry according to skin tones and face shapes, basic tips for jewelry care, fun facts about costume jewelry and several illustrations of vintage advertisements.

The book was such a popular, and informative guide for readers, that it earned the status of a second edition. Executives at Collector Books told Aikins that “20th Century Costume Jewelry” was one of the most popular books the company had published.

In 2005, Collector Books published “100 years of Purses 1880s to 1970” by Aikins. Once again, a consummate source of information the book covered pursues of nearly all types, including beaded, evening, Lucite, pearl, straw, reptile, tapestry and many of the various bags from the 1940s through the 1960s. Going the extra mile, she also included a chapter on German silver, compacts and accessories.

Most of the photos in her books were taken from Aikins’ personal collection.

In addition to writing, Aikins also participated in many of the higher quality shows throughout the eastern United States and throughout her home state of Pennsylvania. She also consigned pieces to a company that provided jewelry for customers at the Opryland Hotel in Nashville.

Now, she is parting with the rhinestones, antique includes a German “Kübelwagen” and one of only three known existing Japanese “Type 95” scout cars.

Of particular interest is an American Red Cross Clubmobile: Once staffed by women who were referred to as “Donut Dollies,” the Clubmobile was used to deliver gum and coffee, magazines and newspapers, and, of course, doughnuts, to those serving on the front. In the museum’s inventory is an original uniform once worn by a “Dolly.”

And then there’s the field service truck, essentially a service station on wheels, that once kept war machinery in working order. Filled with original tools, it’s still equipped with original parts, including those needed to change oil filters and tires, as well as to perform other basic maintenance.

Even though the site is new, its schedule of events has already included commemorative weekends, family events, and USO-type dances. Plans are afoot to make this interactive museum even more so. But it’s not just about nostalgic fun: The World War II American Experience is dedicated to providing educational programs about the war, both overseas and on the homefront.

of historians and veterans, Wilson said. “Sometimes people think that what they have isn’t important, but then it turns out that it is.”

While in Gettysburg, those planning to visit the museum might consider touring the nearby Eisenhower National Historic Site, which preserves the farm of General (and later President) Dwight D. Eisenhower. Respects can be paid to the nearly 500 World War II veterans interred at the Gettysburg National Cemetery, where, more than 150 years ago, President Abraham Lincoln delivered the Gettysburg Address.

and vintage purses, a vast quantity of sterling silver jewelry, a broad array of Juliana Jewelry, designer brands and vintage clothing. She consigned more than 650 eclectic pieces of jewelry and accessories to a two-day online sale conducted by Auctioneer Brian Carey of Blairsville, Pennsylvania.

She is at a point in her life where she is ready to scale down.

“I’m just ready to slow down and I have so much jewelry and other items that it’s time to let some of it go,” Aikins says. “My daughter, who has her own career, is not interested in taking the jewelry any further, so I thought I would pass along many of these fabulous pieces for other people to display and cherish.”

The items are up for bid now, with the first day ending on Aug. 2 and the second day on Aug. 3. The first day will be comprised of 313 lots, followed by 343 lots the next day. Preview day will be Sunday, July 31 from noon to 4 p.m.

Carey, who specializes primarily in antique and estate auction sales, admits the sale is “a little out of my wheelhouse.” But he said he has been dazzled and pleasantly surprised at the fun, colorful and, at times, right-

Winged horse flew past expectations to $65,000 at BreyerFest

BY NANCY KELLY

LEXINGTON, Ky. — BreyerFest, the annual gathering of model horse collectors, has been held online the last two years due to the Covid pandemic. This year Breyer Animal Creations®, a division of Reeves International, Inc., in Pequannock, New Jersey, created a hybrid event with the traditional gathering returning to the Kentucky Horse Park in Lexington accompanied by a virtual event. This allowed people from 72 countries to participate via the internet as in the previous two years while those gathered in Lexington could enjoy the shopping and comradery of the in-person festival.

One of the highlights of the weekend is always the Breyer charity auction, where one-of-a-kind, test models are created by Breyer and then auctioned to raise funds for various horse-related charities. In keeping with the hybrid approach of the weekend, the auction was hosted on bidspirit.com so that off site bidders could participate. The actual, physical models were located in Lexington with auctioneer Dana Balsamo, principal auctioneer and owner of Dana Auctions LLC calling the bids. The online feed featured a live video and audio feed so that the remote audience could feel as if they were there in person, a very nice touch. There were 21 lots total, with a wide variety of attractive models available. There was no buyer's premium and free shipping was offered to the internet winners.

When the glossy silver dun winged horse created on the rearing Lone Ranger's Silver model took the stage, previous price records were shattered. The final bidding came down to one person online and one on site. Each time the onsite bidder raised their bid the crowd cheered, and when the online bidder took the lead, the crowd looked for the next local increment. When the final bid of $65,000 was offered by the online bidder, the onsite customer bowed out, and the sale was made.

The lot that many predicted would command the highest value of the day consisted of the In-Between Arabian Mare, a model that was briefly produced in 1959 and only a small number exist. It was recreated for this auction along hand-painted detail contributed to the winning bid of $16,000.

The theme for BreyerFest this year was Prost! The word means "Cheers!" in German and the entire event was centered around a celebration of Germany, the culture, foods, and other related aspects of the country. A glossy jumping horse done in a pearly black, red, and gold leopard Appaloosa pattern was named "Bundesflagge", which translates to "Federal Flag". These are the colors of the German flag, and it was used to help celebrate BreyerFest: Prost! This handsome, eye-catching piece drew a final bid of $12,000.

The cantering warmblood was introduced to the Breyer inventory in 2017 and was sculpted by Morgen Kilbourn. It was featured last year as the BreyerFest Celebration model, but this year held a place of honor in the charity auction. Finished as a glossy metallic colorshift Appaloosa, it presented a different hue when viewed from different angles, truly stunning no matter which way it turned. It required a high bid of $11,000 to claim this prize.

One of the flashiest models produced by Breyer is the Gypsy Vanner. With a high-stepping stride, ample feathers, and attitude this model is extremely popular with collectors. This particular one was presented in a glossy dapple bay with blue/black points and a hand-drawn sabino spot on his belly. He was eagerly claimed with a high bid of $9,500.

Sometimes when presented as an auction horse, a regular run model will be physically altered to increase its appeal. In the case of the Nokota model, designed by Heather Puleo, it was offered with a roached (shaved) mane in place of the normal wildly flowing mane, giving it an entirely different appearance. Add to that the wild black sabino criollo coloring and it took a high bid of $9,500 claim it.

ing it an entirely different appearance. Add to that the wild black sabino criollo coloring and it was quite the unique picture. A high bid of $9,500 took it home.

Several other breeds, including Arabians, Morgans, Mustangs, and even an Icelandic rounded out the lots for this very successful auction, with remaining bids ranging from $4,700 to $13,000. Proceeds from this event were donated to American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals (ASPCA), 4H Eastern and Western Round-Ups, Humane Society of the United States (HSUS), Professional Association of Therapeutic Horsemanship International (PATH Intl.), and the Cloud Foundation (Wild Mustang and Burro preservation). Plans are underway for the next BreyerFest in July 2023.

 Planning a trip? Event Finder can help you locate auctions and shows. All events listed under the Event Finder heading are advertised in this issue of AntiqueWeek. Events are listed by state, then by town with a brief description of the event, the opening date and finally the page number where the ad can be located.

Event Finder is only for advertised events. Auctioneers and show managers who want to be listed in our free calendar listings may continue to do so. Those free listings will be contained in the Auction or Show calendar sections.

While we have taken great care in compiling the information shown here, we strongly urge you to call the auctioneer or show manager listed for the event in case of cancellations or postponements. We also encourage auctioneers and show managers to contact us with any changes to their schedule. AntiqueWeek is not responsible for errors or omissions.

Calendars can also be searched online at www.antiqueweek.com

You can learn an old craft in this book and have some fun

If my math is correct, it was 59 years ago this month that we first heard the song "Hello Muddah, Hello Fadder," Allan Sherman's story about a kid who hated camp until suddenly he didn't. Let me just say, if I had written a review of "More Beaded Purses: Lessons in Knitting Techniques" by Nancy Seven VanDerPuy last week, I would now be saying "kindly disregard that review." Now that I get it, it's a different story.

My eye immediately went to this title for a number of reasons. As you have probably figured out by now, I love old things. What you might not know is I've never seen a pocketbook I didn't love. And then there's the fact that I knit daily. This book sounds like a match made in heaven, yes? But my romance with this new way of knitting took some courting.

When the book arrived at my door, I couldn't wait to dig in. In her introduction, Nancy noted that it was her companion book, "Knitting Beaded Purses," that was targeted to beginning bead knitters, but as an experienced knitter, I wasn't fazed. Following a pattern is no problem-o, nor is learning a new stitch. Turn the page.

I read the chapter "About Bead Knitting," checked out the pattern for the "Beaded-Knit Christmas Ornament," and flipped ahead a bit to a tutorial for executing the required "twisted knit" stitch. Beginners to bead knitting, Nancy counseled, should begin with large beads and similarly thick yarn. I made a trip to my local craft shop to purchase what she recommended, "a large size bead" and a sport-weight cotton yarn. It was fun picking out the turquoise yarn, but when I saw those lovely size-6 pink and silver beads in the vial, I began to panic. They sure didn't look large to me!

BOOK REVIEW

BY BARBARA MILLER BEEM

I pushed on. Realizing my first beaded project was not going to be a masterpiece, but rather, a practice piece, I followed Nancy's carefully worded and illustrated instructions. All was going well until I got to "With your forefinger, pop bead between needles and to the front of the work," pictured in illustration 4. I just couldn't get it.

It was then that I decided to size up to pony beads, ones leftover from my granddaughters, along with some worsted yarn I had on hand. I knitted and ripped, knitted and ripped, and knitted and ripped again. This went on for days. But then, about a half hour before I began writing this review, I finally, finally, saw where I was going wrong.

So here's the thing. Knitters among you will understand when I say that I hate making a gauge swatch. A bit enthusiastic (or perhaps too impulsive) when I start a project, I want to jump right in. This book, if nothing else, has taught me that this is not a good strategy when it comes to knitting with beads. For me, the key was to go big (with beads and yarn), even bigger than Nancy advises, and get it right. I'd advise you to do the same. Trust me, you'll save yourself a lot of frustration in the end.

As a result, I think that I'm not that far from learning how to perfect Nancy's beginning project, the aforementioned Christmas ornament. And from there, who knows?

When I've told others about this endeavor, a common response is, "Why?" Of course there's the challenge bit, that it's good to learn new skills. But more importantly, I like the idea of keeping an old craft alive. And the thought of the little purses that I might one day be capable of making keeps me moving onward.

In the end, if you've never knitted anything before, you might enjoy this book just for its illustrations. But if you're a knitter with an adventurous streak, I recommend "More Beaded Purses." Just look out for illustration 4.

"More Beaded Purses: Lessons in Knitting Techniques" by Nancy Seven VanDerPuy. Schiffer Publishing, Ltd., Atglen, Pa. 2009. 80 pages. $19.99.

Below: Taking a beautiful motif from an old purse, the author created this lovely accessory that she calls "The Baltimore."

Above: Go big! Whereas the author of the book recommends learning to knit with beads on size 1 needles, with size 6 beads and sport weight yarn, beginners might consider size 10-1/2 needles with pony beads and worsted weight yarn.

Gearheads and automobilia collectors revved up at the Good Guys Show

BY WILLIAM FLOOD

COLUMBUS, Ohio — The massive Good Guys Summit Racing Nationals car show returned to the Ohio Expo Center in Columbus for its 24th season the weekend of July 8-10. More than 6,500 hot rods, muscle cars, vintage trucks, and museum-caliber restorations filled nearly every nook of the fairgrounds.

Acres of cars aside, Good Guys offered something for every type of spectator. Buildings housed specialty collections of Mustangs, Camaros, and Corvettes. A huge midway and an entire expo building featured vehicle restoration companies, parts vendors, and sellers of themed merchandise. There was even an exhibit of vintage models and pedal cars. To keep everyone's pulse racing, there were autocrosses, burnout competitions, and dragster shows.

The promoter, Good Guys Rod & Custom Association, was founded in 1983 by California hot-rodding legend Gary Meadors. Meadors passed along the torch to his son in 2009. Today, Good Guys is the world's largest hot-rodding association with over 70,000 active members worldwide. It hosts 18 events each year. Columbus is the largest, attracting over 100,000 spectators to the Ohio Expo Center each summer.

Automobilia and petroliana dealers and collectors should take notice of the show. In addition to its enjoyable cruise-in side, Good Guys also offers a great sourcing opportunity. There is a huge indoor/outdoor swap meet with everything from antique cars and parts, to collectibles for sale. And since it's a car show and not an antiques event (with resultant price pressures), merchandise is usually reasonably priced.

In the car corral, approximately 200 vehicles were for sale. They ranged from fixers available for the price of a weekend trip to frame-off restorations selling for tens of thousands of dollars.

Gatsby-era enthusiasts could find true antique cars, like a drivable 1927 Chevrolet hardtop in basic black, priced at $6,900. Vehicles from later decades were more prevalent, particularly those from the 1950s and 60s. One of them was a 1960 Mercury Comet from a sole owner of 50 years. The hardtop had 76,000 original miles and was priced better than most contemporary used cars at just $9,000. For retro buffs, there was a good-condition 1979 VW bug convertible with 54,000 miles, available for $13,250.

In addition to vehicle sales, another 200 or so vendors offered everything from body panels and grills to vintage license plates and ephemera. While exceptional items were priced accordingly, many sellers had merchandise for as little as $1.

Car parts, which could be used for restoration or decorating a garage, were abundant. One example was a tattered, yet still eye-catching seat for a '55 to '57 T-Bird, priced at $400. Many sellers had grills. Those for later vehicles started around $50 but the beautiful machine-age grills from the 30s and 40s typically had price tags in the hundreds.

Smaller items like trim pieces and emblems attracted their share of attention. A speedometer for a '55 to '57 Mercury priced at $100 could easily finish off a dashboard or it could make good "eye candy" on a garage wall. Similarly, a pair of armrests from a 1961 Chevy Impala ($20) or an emblem from a 1951 Ford Custom ($10) could either be used by a restorer or snatched up by an antiques dealer to resell.

Petroliana items were plentiful. Examples included: an aluminum Big Boy statue priced at $675; an Autolite spark plug cleaner with its adapters for $150; a good-condition Ford penny gumball machine at $100; and, a 1960s-era Texaco Fire Chief fire helmet premium for $75.

Two prominent categories were license plates and transportation ephemera. Plates averaged $5 for singles and $10 to $12 for matched pairs, although tags preceding the 1950s could run 10-times those amounts. Some ephemera, like old roadmaps, was available for as little as $1, while dealer catalogs ran from $5 to $50 depending on vehicle uniqueness and model year.

Model cars were also prevalent and came in every variety, from packaged newer pieces to well-worn vintage toys. Corgi, Hot Wheels, and Matchbox cars were often only $1 each and attracted young buyers. Popular 1/24th-scale diecast cars from brands like Ertl and Maisto typically ran $10 to $25, although fine examples from premium brands like Franklin Mint sometimes pushed $100. Pressed steel vehicles from makers like Buddy L, Marx, and Structo started around $35 but ran up from there depending on age, rarity, and condition.

Some dealers brought more than auto paraphernalia. Several had vintage bicycles; one had a handful of vintage wagons and tricycles priced from $30. One seller even had a "Dale Earnhardt, Jr" airbrushed vintage drinking fountain, that may or may not have come from a garage, for $90.

Above: Ephemera including roadmaps, dealer catalogs, and garage calendars started at just $1.

Above: Vendors of new and reproduction merchandise like these neon signs filled the midway and an entire building.

Below: These armrests from a 1961 Impala ($20/pair) could help finish a restoration or could make interesting ashtrays for a basement bar.

Above: Texaco Fire Chief Helmets like this one were given away as premiums in the 1960s. They had a built-in microphone and speaker.

Below: This good-condition Ford penny gumball machine was available for $100.

Collecting the Music of Wars

devices. Following the Edison cylinder formats came the flat disc Victrolas. A 1919 Victrola full page magazine ad reads in part, "Second only to the physical needs of the body is the hunger of the mind and spirit for their essential 'food' - music. Victrolas by the tens of thousands are in daily use by our fighting forces on land and sea. The Victrola is teaching French to our soldiers and wireless to our sailors and aviators. Place the Victrola in the homes to keep the American spirit on fighting edge!"

Shortly after that, broadcast radio would begin sending music into untold homes across the country. Music was first broadcast in 1917 by a station at the University of Wisconsin in Madison. This station, WHA, began "Musical Concerts by Wireless" in 1921. Listeners became customers of song sheets even if only to sing along.

After World War II patriotic war-related music became less frequent and anti-war music began to appear.

Sheet music with war and patriotic themes can be fairly easy to find as much of it was preserved in piano benches across American where it eventually found its way into shops and auctions.

Other music related collectibles include general circulation and specialty magazines. Time, Life, Saturday Evening Post and others that featured war songs, their composers and popular performers are readily available. Some feature covers about the music while others only include articles.

Sheet Music Magazine was published from 1976 until 2012. As its name implies, it focused on the music of the times with complete song sheets featured. Cover illustrations included reproductions of earlier song sheets. ETUDE magazine, 1888 through 1957, was primarily for music teachers but also included readers from novice to professional musicians. The magazine supported all music related developments including recordings, radio and television as well as new musical styles like jazz. Etude's July 1917 cover featured a sword carrying Uncle Sam as a bugler with the musical notation of "Taps" flowing from his bugle. A July 1942 issue had a waving American flag surrounded by military service choruses with a "United we Stand" headline. July 1944 saw Uncle Sam offering a War Bond. These issues form excellent collateral material to war music collecting.

Collecting sheet music and these collateral items is not expensive and can address almost any specific topic of interest.

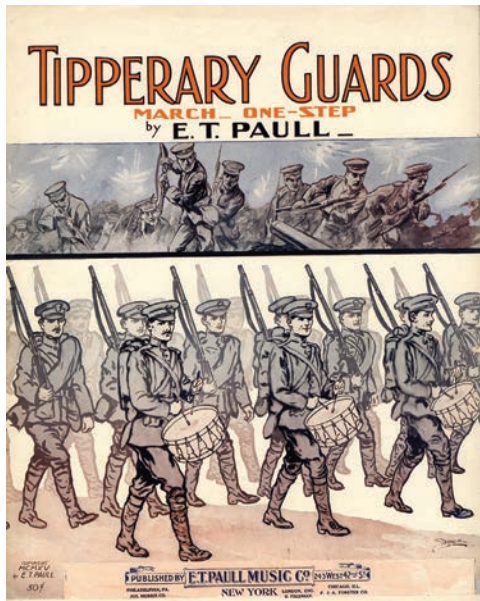

Below: "Johnny Zero" honored our US Army Air Forces fighter aces in the Pacific war against the vaunted Japanese Zero aircraft.

Above: An action image to highlight faith during times of conflict adorns this catchy war song.

Above: New forms of music made light of army training camp drudgery such as KP, Kitchen Police.

Above: With troops scattered all around the world, "There's a Star Spangled Banner Waving Somewhere" reflected that fact
