For 100 years Madame Alexander dolls have delighted

BY DONALD-BRIAN JOHNSON

"A child's doll is precious. It is a friend who shares her secrets, joys, and sorrows. . . something beautiful that is a joy forever." — Madame Alexander

Madame Alexander was the grand dame of dollmaking. From the debut of her first dolls in 1923, New York-born Beatrice Alexander made it to the top of the toy heap, and continued to reign supreme. Under her guidance, fairy tale figures such as "Sleeping Beauty," fictional favorites like "Anne of Green Gables," and newsmakers of the day (Dionne Quintuplets), achieved doll immortality. Alexander dolls ran the gamut of popular culture, and, as Madame herself put it, "once you have one, you will want to have another until you have collected friends from all around the wide, wide world."

Born in 1895, Beatrice Alexander seemed predestined for her future career — the family lived above her stepfather's doll hospital. In a rare 1978 recording for collectors, Madame Alexander recalled her humble beginnings:

"As far back as I can recall, I have always been surrounded with dolls. When my father came to America, he brought with him the profession of doll repair, which he learned in Germany. People came from far and wide. The doll hospital was located on the East Side of New York. I can still see the tearful faces of the children holding their broken dolls. Although we were in limited circumstances, we were never poor. Our lives were filled with love and appreciation. I learned then something I have never forgotten: how important a doll is to a child's world.

"We could hardly get by on the

Elsie the Cow moooves collectors to part with cash

BY LARRY LEMASTERS

One of the most famous faces in advertising history is Elsie the Cow. Decades before today's celebrities appeared on television and in print with a milk mustache and the famous words, "Got milk?" Elsie "mooed" on national television as the first spokesperson for Borden's dairy products, and every American household knew her name.

Elsie's beginnings were humble. During the 1930s, Borden Inc. sought a cow as mascot to spark the imagination of a Depression-tired America. Many cows came and went from Borden's drawing boards. Then, during the New York World's Fair of 1939, Elsie appeared. Elsie, a brown Jersey cow, was an overnight sensation. Born in 1932 at Elm Hill Farms in Brookfield, Mass., Elsie's real name was "You'll Do Lobelia." Soon after her 1939 debut, her photo and caricature appeared in print all across the United States. The original Elsie starred in commercials, made personal appearances, and even starred in an RKO feature film — "Little Men". Sadly, the first Elsie was seriously injured in a truck accident in 1941 and was euthanized. Borden soon replaced her with another brown Jersey and her legend continues to this day.

For the next 30 years, Elsie promoted all of Borden's dairy products. During the 1940s and '50s, Elsie was one of America's most recognized celebrities. According to Shelly Coito, author of the book Elsie the Cow and Bor- den's Collectibles, "Stores were lit up with neon signs of Elsie, and fountains had banners, menu boards, menus and easel back advertisements or her." Elsie's picture was everywhere!

Borden acknowledges that Elsie's appearance has changed over the years. Coito describes Elsie's changes as, "She went from a cow-like appearance to a more feminine looking, animated Elsie." And, it is, for the most part, this more feminine, animated Elsie that America grew up with and loves to collect.

Many advertising collectors seek out Elsie since there are more quality

Elsie items to collect than almost any other type of advertising. Most collections begin with a set of Borden's milk bottles. Borden was the first dairy company to bottle its milk in glass bottles, so it is only natural that collectors seek out these bottles. Values

Ohio stoneware sells strong at Garth Thanksgiving auction

BY SUSAN EMERSON NUTTER

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Garth's Auctioneers & Appraisers' 62nd Annual Thanksgiving Americana Auction took place Nov. 25, proving once again that Americana is this auction house's bread and butter. It also reinforces people love a good homecoming.

This much anticipated auction has always had two aspects; bringing great Americana items to auction, and bringing friends of Garth's Auctions — buyers and consignors alike — together to celebrate their shared interests. Hosting the event the day after Thanksgiving also proved to make this auction a kick-off celebration to the holiday season.

And while all the gathering, hugging, and, "Hey! So happy to see you!" are greatly anticipated, so is the expectation that Garth's will have put together a smashing array of items sure to help holiday shoppers get a jump on their gift-getting list; whether for a loved one or themselves.

Stoneware; more specifically — Ohio stoneware was a favored topic. The auction started off with a bang when Lot 1; an Ohio stoneware churn wearing cobalt blue script stating, "Hormell & Smyth Manufacturers of Stoneware of Tuscarawas Co. Ohio" selling for $2300 (est. $600-$900). This churn stood more than 17 inches tall.

An Ohio stoneware churn again wearing cobalt blue script "Hormell & Smyth Manufacturers of Stoneware of Tuscarawas Co. Ohio" like the above example and which also came to the auction block with the same estimate fell a bit behind price-wise. This example realized $1,200 but the piece did sport some rim chips and "Tuscarawas" had some wear.

for the bottles vary greatly, but all of the sought after Borden's bottles have one thing in common—Elsie's face on the front in red. A pint-size bottle sells for about $50. A quart-size bottle costs up to $100, and a cream top bottle, in mint condition, costs $150 or more on today's secondary markets. If you want to start with an inexpensive bottle, try finding a half-pint bottle in good or mint condition. They cost only $35 or so, and they make fabulous vases for cut flowers in the spring.

A Borden milk bottle accessory, that is a wonderful holiday collectible as well, is the cardboard Christmas wreath that slipped over the top of milk bottles. These wreaths carried holiday greetings to customers from the Borden Company and were slipped over milk bottles by milkmen making their delivery rounds. Today, these wreaths are valued between $40 and $50, depending on the decade in which they were issued. Wreaths from the 1940s are the most sought after.

Milk bottles are not the only Borden collectible from its dairy line. An old egg carton with Elsie's face in the center of a yellow sunflower on the cover costs about $50. Half-gallon ice cream boxes from the 1950s cost up to $45, flat-top, waxed milk cartons cost between $25 and $40, depending on size and color, and cottage cheese containers, again with Elsie's face inside a sunflower, cost up to $50, depending on size and condition.

Elsie toys are also hot collectibles. Elsie dolls are quite popular with collectors, but they range in price from $500 for the 14-inch stuffed Elsie doll to the lower priced 13-inch plush doll by My-Toy creation. It has a rubber face and says, "moo" when tipped over, and it costs around $100.

Other Elsie collectibles include cookbooks (a 1952 Elsie's Cook Book is valued at $50); an unusual fishing collectible is the booklet "How to Tie Knots" from the 1940s that featured Elsie on the front cover ($30); an Elsie cookie jar produced by the Pottery Guild of America in the 1950s costs about $400; a 1941 calendar featuring an early Elsie is worth about $100; and various milkshake glasses with Elsie on them are worth $65 each. There are also Elsie salt and pepper shakers ($100 - $180), rubber masks from the 1950s ($125), 10-inch plastic banks ($350), and even Elsie buttons from 1949 ($75).

Another piece of Tuscarawas stoneware selling strong was the 8-gallon "J. Lambright, Newport, Ohio" crock that also wore brushed cobalt stylized flowers. Notably, the crock also sported a scratch in date of "1850." Having applied handles and selling with a closely matched lid, this 20 ¼ inch vessel realized $2,000.

Garth's is known for bringing to auction some very interesting items. The sale's top lot was a case in point. Three hand-colored lithographs on paper published by Sarony & Major, New York, between 1847 and 1848; large folio unframed prints from "Naval Scene in the Mexican War by H. Walke, Lieut. US Navy" sold together with the cardboard portfolio cover with marbled paper for $5,500 against a pre-sale estimate of $300 to $600. The prints were No. 1 "The US Steam Frigate Mississippi", No. 4 "...Steamers...Mouth of Tabasco River (Mexico)" and No. 8 "US Naval Battery..."

Above: Hailing from Springfield, Ohio, this circa 1880s pine bin with a lift lid and original paint decoration as well as cast iron ends and feet wore the words "C.E. Patric's Double Force Feed Grain Drill with Adjustable Speed". It sold for $1,300.

Vera Cruz...." with an inked notation in the text line. The lot also included a watercolor on paper of a three masted warship flying an American flag.

The furniture category was led by a Soap Hollow styled bed decorated by contemporary cabinet maker, David T. Smith. Made of mixed woods, the King size cannonball finial bed featured grain paint and stenciled decoration, and was labeled "David T. Smith His Work, Morrow, Ohio." It sold for $3,000.

An American classical sideboard; second quarter 19th century, having mahogany veneer and pine as its secondary wood sold for $1,500. This piece boasted square nail construction; a shaped front with conforming top, four drawers including bottle drawers - all dovetailed with applied beading and replaced brasses, and turned legs, brass rope twist applied details and two pull out shelves on either end.

Six American Transitional mahogany side chairs Sheraton to Classical with pierce carved slats, scroll crests and carved legs with acanthus details sold for $2,100 and an American decorated bench brought $1,500. This mid 19th century, pine example had a shaped crest with half post back, turned legs and stretcher base and scrolled arms. It wore its original light olive green paint with stenciled fruit and angel wing decoration.

Of the decorative elements brought to the auction block, a favorite was the grain drill box marked "C. E. Patric's Double Force Feed Grain Drill with Adjustable Speed." From Springfield, Ohio, the circa 1880s pine bin with a lift lid and original paint decoration sold for $1,300.

A full bodied copper pig weather vane with cast zinc head and tail realized $2,500. This 24 inch high by 34.5 inch long oinker had distressed gold leaf over an applied surface patina.

Artwork also was part of this Black Friday event with the featured oil on artist board still life of a bushel basket and barrel of corn by Alfred Montgomery doing very well bringing $4,200.

Margaret Schiffer was known for her exquisite taste in antiques

BY ERIC C. RODENBERG

DOWNINGTOWN, Pa. – Margaret Berwind Schiffer believed that collecting antiques was a never-ending process.

Firmly attesting to her philosophy, Pook and Pook Auctions will be conducting her estate sale at the firm's auction gallery on Jan. 18. Being sold will be about 381 lots, including many lots of early American antique furniture (some dating to the 17th century), unique weathervanes, lots of redware, English horse paintings, Christmas ornaments, an amazing array of toys, very fine English and early American needlework, early English Delftware, Chinese porcelain and much more.

A descendent of Martha Washington, Schiffer was born in 1923 into a family of prominent Philadelphia leaders. She began collecting antiques to furnish a Pennsylvania farmhouse built in 1730 in West Chester, Pennsylvania

She was married to the late Herbert Schiffer who was a highly successful antique dealer in both the United States and Europe for nearly 60 years.

Margaret was an avid collector, who knew her antiques. Money was little concern. She collected the best and had agreements with many of the country's top antique dealers, including Albert Sacks and Joe Kindig, Jr. to allow her to have "first call" on many of their finds.

"Marie was a friend of mine for years. First at the farm and then at Dunwoody Retirement Home until COVID cut off our visits," said Ron Pook, owner and founder of Pook and Pook Auctions. "She wasn't just a collector but a brilliant scholar who didn't suffer fools ... She was generous and gave prime objects of her collection to various institutions. A dear vivacious and learned friend will sadly be missed by myself and others."

The sale has an incredible – and eclectic – selection of antiques. For example, a Charles II stumpwork mirror, circa 1670, is housed in a 24 1/2-inch by 21 1/4-inch mahogany and tortoiseshell veneer frame; a Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, silk on gauze needlework sampler dated 1807 is one of the most prominent of the collection with a pre-sale estimate of $20,000-$30,000; and an Essex County, Massachusetts, silk on linen sampler is impeccable at a pre-sale estimate of $8,000-12,000.

Spread throughout the sale are several early Pennsylvania furniture pieces, including a handsome Chippendale

SEE POOK & POOK PAGE 23

Above: Another major attraction of the Pook and Pook Jan. 18 estate sale of Margaret Berwind Schiffer is an important Pennsylvania Queen Anne walnut armchair, circa 1750. The exquisitely created chair consists of a shell carved crest over a solid splat and outward scrolled arms with knuckle hand rests above a compass seat and shell carved cabriole legs terminating in pointed slipper feet. Presale estimate is $50,000-$80,000.

One of the highly anticipated "stars" of the Pook and Pook Jan. 18 auction of antique collector, scholar and philanthropist Margaret Berwind Schiffer is a 19th century full-bodied copper stag leaping over a shrub weathervane. Measuring 30 inches in height and 31 inches in width, the well-preserved utilitarian piece of art is thought to be made by Harris & Co. from Boston. It is estimated at $30,000-$40,000.

Heritage Auctions shatters numerous records in multiple categories in 2022

DALLAS, Texas (Dec. 28, 2022) – By every estimation, 2022 was a home run for Heritage Auctions.

The auction house recorded more than $1.45 billion in sales in 2022, a record high for the 46-year-old Dallas-based company following 2021's landmark results. It also set dozens of significant auction records spanning most of its categories, including one for the world's most valuable sports collectible when a 1952 Mickey Mantle baseball card sold last summer for $12.6 million.

That total consists of approximately $1.07 billion in auction sales, with the rest constituting private sales brokered by Heritage.

That $1.45 billion does not include the $103.5 million realized for Russian newspaper editor Dmitry Muratov's Nobel Peace Prize medal, which he sold through Heritage on June 21. Heritage waived its commission, and every cent raised from this momentous auction was immediately paid to UNICEF's humanitarian response to the war in Ukraine.

"This has been a historic, headline-making year for Heritage, and I could not be more thankful for our ever-growing, increasingly younger base of client-collectors nor prouder of our thoughtful, diligent team of specialists," says CEO and co-founder Steve Ivy. "We're certainly delighted every time we set a record or exceed consignors' expectations, and it remains a thrill to connect collectors with their passions, but this year we were also able to give back in ways once unimaginable. Heritage remains the world's leading coin and currency auction house, but our expeditious evolution into the world's leading collectibles auctioneer is something we do not take for granted."

Heritage's numerous auction records set in 2022 spanned almost all of the auction house's more than 40 categories. That includes U.S. Coins, which realized more than $310 million in total auction sales, a 21 percent increase over 2021's record-setting numbers.

Among the plentiful highlights: In August, an exceedingly rare 1927-D Double Eagle MS66 PCGS from The Bob R. Simpson Collection sold for $4.44 million, at the time the highest price realized at auction for any U.S. Coin in 2022. Just six weeks later, an 1821 Half Eagle PR65 featured in Heritage's first of several scheduled auctions for the Harry W. Bass Jr. Core Collection realized $4.62 million to top that record.

Heritage's Comics and Comic Art category ended 2022 with more than $195 million in total sales, exceeding 2021's results by 7 percent. The year got off to a web-swinging start with January's $3.36 million sale of Page 25 from 1984's Secret Wars No. 8. That work, which tells the origin story of Spider-Man's black costume, remains the world's most valu-

In November, a hand-colored Calvin and Hobbes Sunday strip from May 24, 1987, sold for $480,000 to set a new auction record for Bill Watterson and his beloved creations. That price also tied the record for the most valuable original newspaper strip ever sold at auction.

April's Comics & Comic Art Signature® realized a staggering $27,674,844, making it, by far, the most successful comics auction ever held.

Heritage's Sports category continued to wow in 2022, realizing more than $157 million in total sales while setting more major auction records than any of its competitors.

In February, the jersey worn by Mickey Mantle when he played his final game as a New York Yankee sold for $2,190,000, the highest price ever paid at auction for a Mantle jersey. In that same auction, one of seven known ticket stubs from Jackie Robinson's big-league debut in the spring of 1947 sold for $480,000 to become the most expensive sporting-event ticket ever sold at auction.

In July, Heritage sold what had been its most valuable sports collectible: Indianapolis Colts owner and philanthropist Jim Irsay paid $6.18 million for Muhammad Ali's World Boxing Council heavyweight championship belt, which Ali earned in his victory over George Foreman in 1974's legendary Rumble in the Jungle. Then came August's headline-seizing sale of the Mickey Mantle card that redefined a hobby and an industry.

On Aug. 28, the 1952 Topps Mantle, graded a Mint+ 9.5 by SportsCard Guaranty Corporation, sold for a record-shattering $12.6 million, which remains the highest price ever realized at auction for any sports collectible. That wasn't the lone headline from that event, during which Babe Ruth's game-used and signed bat dating from 1918 to 1922 sold for $1.68 million to become the most valuable game-used bat ever sold at auction.

Heritage's Historical category saw remarkable growth in 2022, with total sales realizing more than $36.3 million, a 124 percent jump from 2021's $16.2 million. This year Heritage introduced its Historical Platinum events, thoughtfully curated auctions spanning centuries of human achievement.

In May, a rocking chair commissioned by President John F. Kennedy sold at Heritage Auctions for $591,000, the highest price ever paid for one of the late president's prized rockers. The most recent Platinum auction, held at the beginning of December, saw the only known photograph of Marilyn Monroe inscribed to Joe DiMaggio sell for $300,000 to set a new auction record for a signed Monroe photograph.

Jewelry shone particularly brightly at Heritage in 2022 as the category saw a 22 percent increase in total sales, from $21.6 million to more than $26.38 million. In September, a .21-carat Fancy Orange Red Diamond shattered estimates when it sold for $1,755,000, nearly 12 times its pre-auction estimate, to become the highest price ever paid for an item of jewelry at Heritage Auctions.

Timepieces, too, saw an uptick in sales in 2022, from $4.58 million to $6.19 million. Client-collectors also bought more Luxury Accessories in 2022 than ever, as the category realized $5,831,928 in total sales.

The Entertainment & Music category likewise saw an uptick in sales in 2022, jumping 10 percent from $19.877 million to $21.787 million. Twice this year, Heritage set new records for concert posters – first in April, when a poster from the Beatles' 1966 Shea Stadium concert realized $275,000, then again in November, when the rarest-known Buddy Holly poster, from "The Day the Music Died," realized $447,000.

In 2022 Heritage introduced a new category, VHS and Home Entertainment, which kicked off with a bang in June, when actor Tom Wilson's shrink-wrapped copy of his original Back to the Future VHS tape sold for $75,000 to become, at the time, the most world's valuable sealed and graded videotape.

Heritage has long prided itself in being the leading Illustration and American Art auctioneer. In 2022 the auction

There are numerous redware figural dogs and bird whistles. Also being sold are several Delft plates, many of them dating to the 1700s, plus a fine array of Chinese porcelain.

On the whimsical side is a huge (19 inches high and 31 1/2 inches wide) German-painted Noah's Ark with more than 140 pairs of animals and fowl and more than 70 single animals and fowl (for a grand total of more than 350 separate pieces). "That has to be the largest one in the world," Pook said. "I think she bought that 20 years ago at the Delaware Antique Show for $40,000."

"This sale has everything," Pook said. "It's a collection that has been very selectively collected for at least 70 years. It's one of the last old sales. I house was thrilled to set several records in the category, including ones for author-illustrator Maurice Sendak and artist Shepard Fairey.

On May 11, Sendak's Let the Wild Rumpus Start! (Happy Birthday Wild Things!), painted in 1988 to celebrate the 25th anniversary of Where the Wild Things Are, set an auction record for the artist when it sold for $212,500. Eight days later, one of the three Shepard Fairey HOPE collages made for Barack Obama's 2008 presidential campaign sold for a record-setting $735,000.

The art world was shaken and stirred in October when one of the most famous images of James Bond became among the most valuable: Ohio native Robert McGinnis' original painting for the 1965 Thunderball poster sold for $275,000, setting a new auction record for the 96-year-old artist who redefined the way audiences forever saw 007.

In November, Mark Rothko saw an auction record for an early figurative work from a seminal series: $1.45 million for A Last Supper. In that same auction, artist and illustrator of the social realism school Stevan Dohanos saw an auction record for 1944's Penny Candy, a Saturday Evening Post cover, at $375,000.

Madame Alexander

the German representatives. My mother would clean them, comb their hair, and make them as presentable as possible, and we would sell them in our shop.

“After the first World War began, the importation of all dolls ceased, and we found ourselves with no dolls to sell. They always say ‘necessity is the mother of invention,’ and it certainly was true in our family! To help my parents, I designed my first dolls that year. They were a little Red Cross nurse, and a baby doll. The demand for them was so great, my father had to work day and night to fill the orders. This helped them through the most difficult times.

“When my child was ten years old, I made my first step into the commercial field. My little daughter was the inspiration for my first commercial baby doll. We called her ‘Billie,’ and this is how the Alexander doll began.

“Throughout the passing years, the style and composition of my dolls have changed, but one thing remains the same: the doll must be sturdy and beautiful.”

Beatrice Alexander’s first dolls (beautiful, but nearly impossible to find today) were of cloth. Next up: “composition” dolls, also beautiful, but, as their cracked faces will testify, not particularly high on the sturdiness ladder. Then, in the years following World War II came the innovation that cemented the Alexander reputation for durability: the hard plastic doll, beloved by baby boomers everywhere.

Throughout her career, Madame Alexander was a canny entrepreneur, ready to capitalize on the trendsetters of the day. Her “Scarlett O’Hara” (of Gone With The Wind fame) was the first doll licensed as a book and movie tie-in. Such Hollywood stars as skater Above: Awake for awhile: “Sleeping Beauty.” 14” h., $50-75.

Sonja Henie, and child phenomenon Margaret O’Brien saw themselves re-envisioned as dolls, while a World War II series paid tribute to women in the service.

In the 1930s, when multiple births were still a rarity, Canada’s “Dionne Quintuplets” were headline-grabbers around the globe. Madame Alexander made sure her tiny fans could acquire their own set of authorized quint dolls, releasing varied versions of the famous five. Some even came with accessories: sleep baskets, a wooden bed, and a rendition of their physician, Dr. Dafoe.

Multiples proved an Alexander specialty: for the 1953 coronation of Queen Elizabeth II, a set of three dozen renditions of the Queen-to-be and her entourage were released. “First Ladies of the United States” in their inaugural gowns provided an ongoing treasure trove of possibilities, as well as the basis for a lavish 1976 Smithsonian exhibition in honor of America’s Bicentennial.

Over the years, Madame Alexander dolls have encompassed almost every imaginable category. There were “Storyland Dolls,” such as “Alice in Wonderland” and “Snow White”. “Friends From Many Lands” were decked out in their native costumes (“how wonderful it would be if each of us could have a friend in every country in the whole wide world!”). “Portraits of History”, such as Josephine and Napoleon were “inspired by the colorful past.” “Portrait Dolls” (“as elegant as the finest portrait taken from the masters”), included representations of works by Monet, Toulouse Lautrec, and Goya, while “Dolls From The Opera” featured such fiery divas as “Carmen” and “Salomé (each “glamorously gowned and coiffed”).

Some subjects called for more than one interpretation. A slew of “Little Women”-inspired dolls depicted them in everything from aproned at-home wear to full winter apparel, including ice skates.

Generics also proved staples of the Alexander line. There were “Beautiful Baby Dolls,” including the perennially popular “Pussycat” and “Puddin” (“so real to look at and feel”). The “exquisite girl doll,” “Elise,” was often outfitted as a ballerina, a bridesmaid, or now and then a bride. “Wendy Ann,” a young girl doll, proved particularly resilient, equally at home in a frilly party dress, or in playclothes pulling a Radio Flyer wagon.

Once the traditional inventory had been worked through, there was one more doll needed to complement a Madame Alexander collection: Madame’s own “self-portrait doll.” Boasting a remarkable resemblance to its creator, the “Madame Alexander” doll was, noted the 1984 company catalog, “beautifully dressed in a pink satin gown topped by a rhinestone-studded cape, and accented with Madame’s trademark rose corsage.”

Early Alexander dolls (and even their clothing) can be pricey, at times running into thousands of dollars. More recent dolls are more reasonably priced: 21-inch dolls top the price list in the low hundreds, followed by 14-inchers, and the 8-inch “Alexander-kins,” introduced in 1953. Find one in its original blue box (as you often will), and your shopping day is complete.

As durable as the dolls she created, Beatrice Alexander continued to spearhead the Alexander Doll Company well into her nineties, passing away in 1990. Her dolls, however, continue to live on, through vintage inventory and collector clubs, as well as through new releases from the still-thriving company. The dolls that delighted baby-boomers, (and their mothers, and perhaps their grandmothers as well), continue to delight the collectors of today, who appreciate their imaginative themes and beautifully detailed quality—the heritage of Madame Beatrice Alexander.

“Some people think that dolls are only for children,” said Madame Alexander. “They are wrong. You must never underestimate the marvelous ability to appreciate beauty wherever you find it, in dolls and in life. We must always look for what is fine and beautiful in every person.”
