The sweet sounds of the 1970s live on in albums

BY WILLIAM FLOOD

Earlier this year, the music world lost Burt Bacharach, one of the most prolific songwriters of the 20th century. It's hard to imagine the number of his songs that people know by heart. Bacharach's work stretched back to the 1950s but he is best remembered for his contribution to the sounds of the 1970s. Arguably his most famous tune, "Raindrops Keep Fallin' on My Head," hit number 1 in 1970. His other chart-toppers included Jackie DeShannon's, "What the World Needs Now," handfuls of songs like "Walk on By" written for Dionne Warwick, and "Close to You" for the Carpenters.

Just months before Bacharach's death, another 70s icon, Olivia Newton-John, lost her extended battle with cancer. While she may be best known for her role in the musical Grease, it was angelic songs like, "I Honestly Love You" and "Have You Never Been Mellow" that endeared legions of fans.

Burt Bacharach and Oliva Newton John were part of a generation of astonishingly talented musicians who helped create what we now call soft rock or easy listening. Singer/songwriters of the 70s most often wrote, sang, and played their own material - taking transcendent themes like first flames, coming of age, and tragic loss, and turning them into some of the greatest lyrical poetry ever recorded. That genius didn't come out of the bubble gum 50s nor the counterculture of the 60s. It began disappearing in the 80s when popular music turned vapid.

Easy listening is often scoffed at, yet its influence is profound. If you are unconvinced, chase down a 70s ballad on YouTube and check the statistics. Most have millions of views and comments running thousands deep. Read the comments, and you will discover how impactful those songs can be. Grown men openly admit to tears upon hearing a verse forever linked to a life event. Millennials proclaim they were born in the wrong decade. Commenters express gratitude for words that carried them through life. As one person so eloquently proclaimed, "Thank God I heard angels and poets who gave their gifts through the most amazing music..."

commonly known, she wrote popular 60s tunes like "Up on the Roof" and "The Loco-Motion." She even wrote for the Beatles. But it was the emotion-laden songs she penned during the 70s that became cherished. Many appeared on her classic 1971 album Tapestry. The dozen tunes are resplendent - but one simple lyric stands out - "you've got a

Above: In addition to LP albums, plenty of 1970s singles still abound. Most are inexpensive, like this Carpenters 45 available for $2.

If you would like to bring home some of that artistry, here's some inspiration:

... W i n t e r , spring, summer, or fall...all you have to do is call...

Carole King has blessed the world with an astounding number of songs. Not only has she written popular 60s tunes like "Up on the Roof" and "The Loco-Motion," she even wrote for the Beatles. But it was the emotion-laden songs she penned during the 70s that became cherished. Many appeared on her classic 1971 album Tapestry. The dozen tunes are resplendent - but one simple lyric stands out - "you've got a friend." ...I've seen fire and I've seen rain...

James Taylor wrote "Fire and Rain" dealing with the tragic suicide of a childhood friend. It first appeared on the 1970 album Sweet Baby James. On a later album, alongside Carly Simon, Taylor beseeched listeners to, "Shower the people you love with love." In between, he took listeners down country roads, exalted his native North Carolina, and wove a south-of-the-border fantasy. Start a collection with the 1975 James Taylor's Greatest Hits which holds many of his iconic songs.

...Hey, have you ever tried, really reaching out for the other side...

It opens with crystal clear guitar that makes listeners pause. By mid-tune, instrumentation segues to dreamy violin. Perhaps no band embraced romantic ballads better than David Gates and Bread - their lyrics and melody are simply enchanting. "Make it With You" has been a lover's aria for five decades. Other touching tracks include "Lost Without Your Love" and "Anything I Own," in which Gates speaks of the heartache of losing his father. The best of Bread Volume 1 compiled in 1973 and Volume 2 from 1974 are good places to begin a collection of their work.

...There's a warm wind blowin' the stars around and I'd really love to see

All aboard the Lionel Mickey Mouse train set

BY RYAN PADGETT

In 1929, Walt Disney presented Mickey’s Choo-Choo, a Mickey Mouse Sound Cartoon depicting Mickey saving Minnie Mouse from a runaway boxcar that ultimately crashes into a series of farm animals. The cartoon concludes with Mickey and Minnie escaping the crash on a makeshift handcar (the 2:56 minute cartoon is available for viewing on YouTube).

Walt Disney’s love for trains is well documented, with a self-authored article featured on the cover of the October 1965 issue of Railroad magazine. Trains play a prominent role at Disneyland, Disney World, and within other Disney-classic cartoons such as Dumbo, but it was the Mickey’s Choo-Choo cartoon short that is rumored to not only have served as inspiration for one of Disneyana’s most treasured collectibles, it may have also saved a beloved company.

Joshua Lionel Cowen, a toy and train inventor, founded the Lionel Manufacturing Company in 1900. The Great Depression pushed Lionel to the brink of bankruptcy before a brilliant partnership between Lionel and Disney in 1934 saved the train manufacturer. According to “Disney A to Z: The Official Encyclopedia” (2006), the judge in the bankruptcy court allowed Lionel to produce the Mickey and Minnie Lionel handcar before the holiday season. Initially sold for $1, the train set would sell more than 250,000 units. According to “Stern’s Guide to Disney Collectibles” (1989) the popularity of the train set saved Lionel from bankruptcy and helped the company thrive.

The 1934 “Mickey Mouse Hand Car” (No. 1100) consists of 4 1/2-inch Mickey and Minnie composition figures pumping around a Lionel O-gauge track. Though the figures’ bodies are composition, Minnie’s hat is wood and both figures have rubber legs and rubber tails. The handcars metallic body came in red and green variations (and according to Stern, a very rare maroon is also available) and was motorized by a turn key. Condition is paramount when assessing value, with particular attention to the figures extremities and the original paint detail. Current values range from $250 - $400 depending on condition and original key. Original track and box bring a premium considering the original cardboard box is nearly 90 years old (valued around $400 - $500).

Following up on their successful partnership, Lionel released the

Celebrate Old Stuff Day all month long

March, the month that’s named for the Roman god of war, is said to “come in like a lion,” as well as officially being designated as “National Women’s History Month.” But in addition to “Pi Day” on the 14th and “St. Patrick’s Day” three days later, lovers of old things have plenty to celebrate.

First off, there’s the second week of March, officially deemed “Crochet Week.” As it happens, some of my best friends do things with yarn and a hook (as opposed to knitters like me who prefer to use needles). But “Granny core” is a major “thing,” and crocheted granny squares sewn together to make afghans, potholders, and vests are suddenly back in style. Just a reminder, care for vintage pieces by airing them out or putting them in the dryer on “fluff” to lose the odor of mothballs before enjoying these family heirlooms.

But that’s not all. Let’s begin with March 2, “Old Stuff Day.” (Could I make this up?) I suppose this is the day to officially celebrate “old stuff,” treasures that many of us would prefer to refer to as “antiques and collectibles.” Never mind. Go ahead, use the old china for dinner. Spend some time picking through your postcard collection. And dust off whatever you have sitting in a place of honor on the top shelf of your cabinet or bookcase.

March 9 is “Barbie Day.” Guess what Nicole Miller vest I’ll be sporting on that day? The following day is “International Find a Pay Phone Booth Day.” Good luck on that one. But it might be a good time to suggest that the younger folks in your life put down their mobile phones for a day to hear about how we always kept a dime on our person, just in case. Also falling on March 10 is “Middle Name Pride Day.” My middle name, “Sherry,” was the maiden name of my paternal grandfather’s Mom. If your name has a family connection, take a few minutes with family members to bring them up to date. Remind them that for $250 and the three tin cars recently selling for upwards of $400. The accessories, including the Mickey bark-er and cardboard imagery, range from $150 - $300 each. A complete boxed set in very fine condition recently sold for over $2,000.

Lionel stayed on “track” with the production of the rarest of the vin-tage Lionel Disney trains, the 1936 #1105 Mickey Mouse and Santa Hand Car. Nearly identical in scope to the Mickey and Minnie Handcar, this train features Santa Claus with Mick-ey peeking out of Santa’s toy sack strapped on his back and a Christmas tree opposite the hand car. This train, regardless of box and track, consis-tently sells for $900, making it one of the most sought-after Lionel Dis-ney-inspired trains.

The Lionel Corporation culminat-ed their vintage Disney partnership with the production of the 1936 #1107 Donald Duck Rail Car. This impres-sive 7-inch train is designed to show a long-billed Donald Duck commut-ing Pluto and his doghouse along an O-gauged track. Pluto’s head bobs while the train moves creating a set in box with key bringing upwards of $600.

Walt Disney’s affection for trains may have saved the Lionel Corpora-tion from bankruptcy, but his passion provided collectors with some of the most detailed and showcasing trains. Lionel and Disneyana collectors alike clamor for these timepieces. Though Lionel continues to produce Mick-ey Mouse related trains to this day, nothing captures the prewar aesthet-ics of these pieces to the “trained” eye.

listening to family stories is so much more personal than looking up family trees on the internet.

Which brings us to March 12, “Girl Scouts Day.” Girl Scouts seem to skip a generation in my family, but I still have some pretty cool Brownie memorabilia. It’s always struck me how there are many more Boy Scouts collectors than there are of the female equivalent. Or are there? I’m thinking about looking into this, just say-ing. Watch this space.

Flipping the page of the daily calen-dar we come to “Jewel Day,” March 13. If you’re like me, you have a lifetime (thus far) of pretty jewelry sitting in a box, but all the while, you wear the same pieces day in and day out. One of my 2023 New Year’s resolutions was to unearth some of my hid-den treasures, especially the vintage pic-ces, and wear them. So far, so good. And if that wasn’t your intention on January 1, it’s not too late to begin.

Which brings us to “National Quilting Day,” the third Saturday of the month. If you’re not a quilter (I gave it my best shot back in the days leading up to the Bicentennial), at least appreciate a quilt that someone in your family made. On the other hand, I suppose yoyo quilts “count.” Decades ago, my maternal grandmother refined my hand sewing skills with this project. Today, appreciating the memories behind this endeavor, I’ve had several squares framed. I look at them everyday and think of her.

Onward. March 21 is “Tea for Two Day.” Unearth your best cups and saucers (dou-ble points if you have Royal Albert’s “Old Country Roses”) and host an intimate tea party. Triple points if you use (a) sil-ver tongs for sugar cubes; (b) a silver tea strainer, or (c) a tea cozy.

Coming to the end of the month, there’s “Make Up Your Own Holiday Day” on the 26th. And finally, we can celebrate “Na-tional Mom and Pop Business Owners Day” on March 29 by haunting our favorite antique shops. Forward march!

Above: Yoyo quilts are lovely on beds but a challenge to maintain because of their fragility and weight. On the other hand, when framed, these four squares dramatically fill a large wall space.

Above: “Old Stuff Day” is March 2, a per-fect excuse for poring over a collection of postcards like this one featuring old scenes of Baltimore.

Left: This silver decanter tag is perfect for “Middle Name Pride Day” if your middle name happens to be “Sherry.” There must be a way to transform it into a pen-dant on a necklace. Any ideas?

Ray Tosch inducted into MAA Hall of Fame

MOUNT PLEASANT, Mich. – The late Ray Tosch from Tosch Auction Services in Capac, Michigan, was recently enshrined in the Michigan Auctioneers Association Hall of Fame. The prestigious honor is bestowed after a rigorous qualification process and ultimately voted by the Hall of Fame committee. Being inducted into the Hall of Fame is the highest recognition any auctioneer can receive in the auction industry.

“Several qualified candidates were nominated, but one former member stood out from the pack – and that was Ray Tosch. Sadly, Mr. Tosch passed away in 2014, but the Hall of Fame committee felt strongly that this man deserved a place in the Michigan Auctioneers Association Hall of Fame. His reputation within the industry and community was impeccable, and his contributions to the Michigan Auctioneers Association will forever be appreciated. Importantly, several members of his family were present during the induction, and they were taken aback by the warm reception Mr. Tosch received after all these years.” Said Executive Director and fellow Hall of Famer, Tricia Wiltjer.

Tosch was born in 1929. While working on his parents 2,500-acre farm, he became a real estate broker and sold farm and industrial equipment. In 1955, he graduated from Reisch Auction College in Mason

City, Iowa, and worked with one of the most prominent auctioneers in the livestock auction industry, CB Smith, from Williamston, Michigan. Meanwhile, he established Ray Tosch and Associates. His son, Ron, would join him in 1977, along with his son Bobby.

He was a longtime Capac State Bank board member, and a lifetime member of the Michigan Auctioneers Association. He was universally known as “a man of his word” with time, money, and knowledge. He aided the Boy Scouts of America, Capac area churches, private schools, and more. He worked for nearly 60 years as a professional auctioneer and conducted approximately 4,000 auctions in his lifetime.

His most significant contribution to the Michigan Auctioneers Association came in the 1950s when the association was in dire financial straits, and the future of the association was bleak. Stan Perkins motioned that the association sell Life Memberships to provide instant relief. The motion passed, and three members, Stan Perkins, CB Smith, and Ray Tosch contributed. Seventy years later, the Michigan Auctioneers Association is thriving, and it is one of the most successful associations in the country.

Thousands of auctioneers have become members of the Michigan Auctioneers Association, and only 43 members have been inducted into the Hall of Fame. The MAA is honored that Ray Tosch will forever be remembered and treasured with the highest possible recognition any auctioneer can achieve.

Established in 1951, the Michigan Auctioneers Association is dedicated to enhancing Michigan’s Auction Industry through education, promotion, advocacy, and networking. The MAA is the professional association for auctioneers in Michigan, continuing to be one of the leaders in the industry, and is proving to continue in that direction in the future. The Michigan Auctioneers Association is the most significant representation of auctioneers in Michigan, providing a forum for networking, and sharing ideas and experiences. For more information about the Michigan Auctioneers Association and the auction industry in Michigan, log onto www.FindMichiganAuctions.com.

Fishesville show celebrating 70th event in May

FISHERSVILLE, Va. — The Fishersville Antiques Expo has been a semi-annual event held at the Augusta Expo Event Center for more than 37 and this year’s spring show marks a significant milestone – the 70th edition of the event.

Originally known as the “Shenandoah Antiques Expo,” dealers and customers, not just in the mid-Atlantic region but virtually all along the eastern seaboard and as far west as Texas, informally and with few exceptions, referred to it simply as the “Fishersville Show.” “Fishersville” became such a household name throughout the antiques community, that it was eventually added to the event name; becoming the “Fishersville Shenandoah Antiques Expo.” When Lesley Stokes became co-owner of the show, she spearheaded the use of the internet and social media in the marketing of the show. She understood often, “less is best” for internet and social media searches. So, she suggested capitalizing on a shorter, simpler and familiar name – hence was born the show’s new name, the “Fishersville Antiques Expo.”

While the evolution of the show’s name is interesting, more important is you don’t survive 37 years and 69 shows in the antiques business unless you are fine-tuned to the ebbs and flows of the trade.

It’s the shared feeling of the extended Fishersville family that encompasses the promoters, dealers and customers alike – their relationships – their mutual respect – their willingness to share their knowledge

Above: The Fishersville Antique Expo will be celebrating its 70th event on May 19-20 at the Augusta Expo Event Center in Fishersville, Va.

Center, 277 Expo Rd, Fishersville, VA. It will be open Friday, May 19, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Saturday, May 20, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Admission is $10 per person on Friday (early shopping and two-day pass) and $5 per person on Saturday. Tickets sold at the gate, rain or shine. For more info visit www.heritagepromotions.net or call Heritage Promotions at (804) 239-0553

The big eyes of American artist Margaret Keane

BY LARRY LEMASTERS

If you like Amy Adams as an actress, chances are you saw the movie Big Eyes, a 2014 American biographical drama. The movie covered the relationship between American artist Margaret Keane and her second husband, Walter Keane, who, in the 1950s and 1960s, took credit for Margaret’s phenomenally popular paintings of children with big eyes. The movie focused on Margaret’s long battle to receive recognition for the paintings she created.

Today, Margaret Keane’s paintings and prints are still highly collectible. In the late 1950s and throughout the 1960s, her work flourished and was hung in hundreds of thousands of American homes, in dormitories, in galleries, and in art museums. Today, while artistic passion has changed, many people still collect Keane’s big-eyed people.

Peggy Doris Hawkins, better known as Margaret D. H. Keane, was born in 1927, and she died in 2022. She became famous for her oil paintings of women, children, and animals with big eyes. Keane was a very successful artist due to her inexpensive reproductions on prints, cups, and plates. Due to print transfers, Keane’s work was literally everywhere for a while. Speaking once on why she painted Big Eyes, Margaret said, “The eyes I draw on my children are an expression of my own deepest feelings. Eyes are windows of the soul.”

Keane’s ex-husband, Walter Keane, claimed he was the painter of the work. The two married in 1955 with Walter Keane becoming Margaret’s manager. Walter immediately began selling her characteristic “big eyes” paintings that grew in popularity because of their wide-eyed innocence, making people simply feel good about owning one. By 1957, Walter was exhibiting the “big eyes” paintings as his own work, and Margaret, reportedly afraid of Walter, remained silent.

By the 1960s, flower children of all ages loved the big-eyed paintings, and Walter became a popular and financially successful artist, selling his wife’s paintings under his name. Many famous celebrities supported Walter’s work and fame, including pop artist Andy Warhol who said of Walter’s work, “I think what Keane has done is just terrific. It has to be good. If it were bad, so many people wouldn’t like it.” The truth was, many people did like the work but they would not have liked Walter as the artist if the truth of his artistic theft had been known.

Keane was commissioned to paint a large painting for the 1964-65 World’s Fair with a procession of doe-eyed waifs on a staircase, stretching from the horizon to the foreground. Art critic John Canaday described Keane as a painter celebrated “for grinding out formula pictures of wide-eyed children of such appalling sentimentality that his product has become synonymous among critics definition of tasteless hack work. Of the World’s Fair painting, Canaday said, “It contains about 100 children and hence is about 100 times as bad as the average Keane.”

Margaret divorced Walter Keane in 1965, and in 1970 she stunned the art world by announcing on a radio broadcast she was the real creator of the big eye paintings that had been attributed to her ex-husband Walter Keane. Keane denied her claims, and several years of back and forth accusations ensued.

In 1986, Margaret sued Walter and USA Today newspaper in federal court for an article USA Today published claiming Walter was the true artist of the big eye paintings. At the trial, the judge ordered both Margaret and Walter to create a big-eyed painting in the courtroom to determine who was telling the truth. Walter declined to paint, but Margaret completed a new big eye painting in front of everyone in 53 minutes. After a three-week trial, Margaret was awarded $4 million in damages. After the verdict, Margaret Keane said, “I really feel that justice has triumphed. It’s been worth it, even if I don't see any of that four million dollars." And she didn't!

Margaret Keane

Keane continued to work right up to her death, so she was a prolific painter beyond the Big Eyes fame and controversies.

Many collectors only seek prints since a prime, original Margaret Keane painting is valued around $25,000 or more. Even the artist's prints may be expensive since a print in good shape is worth about $1,500. A signed print is worth more. However, many original Keane prints are available on the Internet, starting at around $200.

Margaret Keane's big-eyed children inspired many copycat artists, so let the buyer beware. Artists such as Eden, Gig, Maio, Franca, and Sherle all copied Margaret's large, sad-eyed waif appearance.

Harlequins, homeless children, ballerinas, and clowns were popular subjects of these copycat artists.

Of her life's work, Margaret Keane said, "People either hate my paintings or they love them. There does not seem to be much middle ground. I finally got to the point where I decided I don't care if it's good art or bad art - it's what I do. I enjoy doing it, and people like it."

you tonight...

England Dan and John Ford Coley were one of the most recognized song-writing duos of the 70s. They gifted the world with unforgettable tunes like “I’d Really Love to See You Tonight,” “Nights are Forever Without You,” and “We’ll Never Have To Say Goodbye Again.” Their second single, “Love is the Answer” released in 1976, went to gold in months. Their albums, Nights are Forever (1976), Dowdy Ferry Road (1977), Some Things Don’t Come Easy (1979) and Dr. Heckle and Mr. Jive (1979) are all definitive - or opt for the Greatest Hits from 1979.

...Operator, could you help me place this call...

Jim Croce’s underdog tales, “Bad, Bad Leroy Brown” and “You Don’t Mess Around with Jim” still get plenty of air-play. Yet, his ballads were poignant - like “Operator” which wove a wistful tale of betrayal and loss, and “Time in a Bottle” which was pure lyrical expressionism. Start a collection with the 1972 album, You Don’t Mess Around with Jim, plus 1973 releases, Life and Times and I Got a Name. For an overview, hunt for the 1974 greatest hits collection, Photographs and Memories.

...I don’t know where I’m running now, I’m just running on...

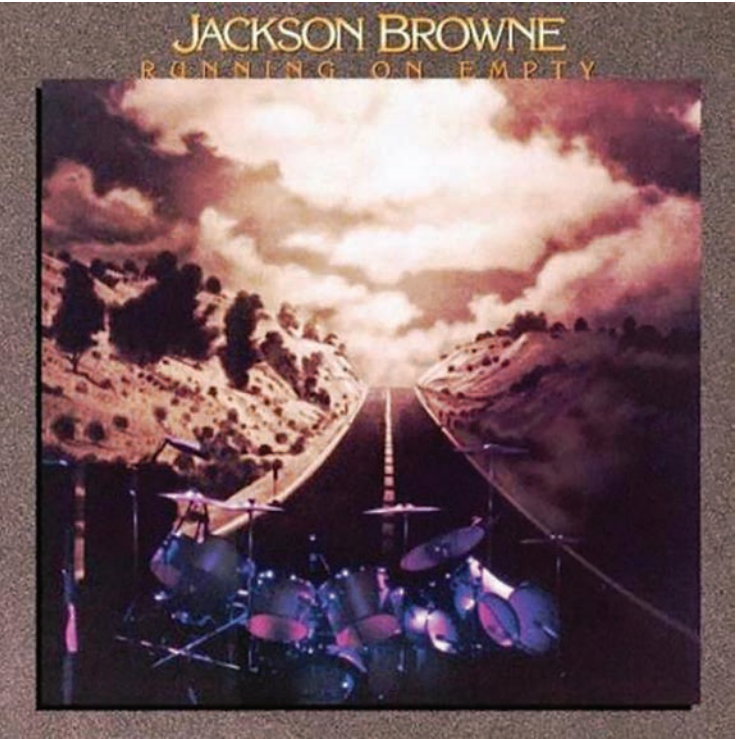

Jackson Browne’s “Running on Empty” is a road trip anthem. Nearly 50 years after its release, concert audiences still can’t resist singing along. It’s the same with other favorites like, “Doctor My Eyes,” “Fountain of Sorrow,” and “The Pretender.” Shoot for a collection of Jackson Browne’s early work - the original Jackson Browne (1972), For Everyman (1973), Late for the Sky (1974), The Pretender (1976), and Running on Empty (1977).

...Standing on a corner in Winslow Arizona...

“Take it Easy” was written by Jackson Browne and Eagles’ Glen Frey. Browne was the first to release the track, but the Eagles made it famous. Glen Frey along with bandmate Don Henley were responsible for most of the band’s other hits like, “Desperado,” “Lyn’ Eyes,” and “Tequila Sunrise.” The greatest hits album (1976) is a perfect starting point because it covers so many of their popular songs. ...Listen carefully to the sound of your loneliness, like a heartbeat, drives you mad...

Any literature student can recognize the allusion to Edgar Allen Poe’s verse in Fleetwood Mac’s “Dreams.” The song addressed ending relationships within the band. It was included on the 1977 Rumours album and went number one that year. Rumours, along with the 1975 self-titled Fleetwood Mac album, brought timeless songs like “Don’t Stop,” “Go Your Own Way,” and “Rhiannon.” The songwriting team of Lindsey Buckingham and Stevie Nicks was responsible for most of them.

...He was born in the summer of his 27th year...

John Denver’s singing career began in 1971. The self-proclaimed country boy captivated listeners with his chronicle of the Rocky Mountains, ode to the country roads of West Virginia, and even celebration of the exploits of explorer Jacques Cousteau. Denver also expressed beautifully on a personal level - as in his ode to his wife, “Annie’s Song” and “Fly Away” sung with Olivia Newton-John. Virtually every 1970s Denver album is worth having. Additionally, three greatest hits albums cover his 70s work.

for others, including America, Barry Manilow, the Carpenters, Elton John, Firefall, and Poco to name a few. You can sample the array by picking up one of the K-tel compilations that were popular during the decade.

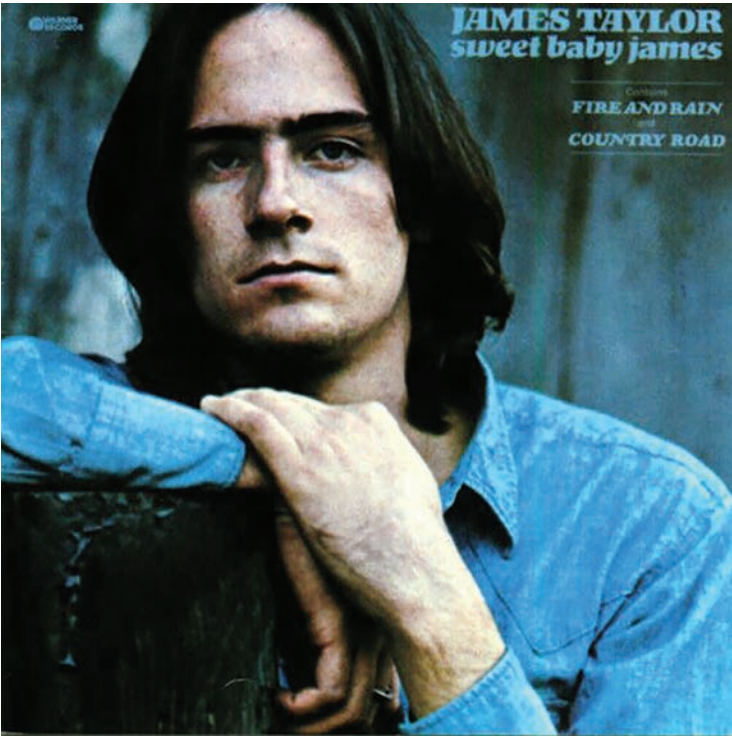

Vinyl is the go-to medium for collecting these artists’ work. Fortunately, while original LPs are hot collectibles, easy listening from the 70s tends to get overlooked in favor of recordings from harder rock artists. That means soft rock albums remain prevalent and can often be purchased for less than $5. Given their beautiful cover art, 70s-era albums also make great wall decor, particularly if autographed. Frames are readily available.

Don’t forget, music of the decade was also released on cassette and 8-track tapes. Anyone with a classic car might appreciate some 70s soft rock for their in-dash tape deck. When the driver pops
