The singles living in the '60s required just the right tunes

BY DONALD-BRIAN JOHNSON

The lights are low. The shag carpet's lush. The gleam from a crackling fireplace reflects off leather sofas and burnished wood. The drinks are cold, and the hi-fi's humming. It's the early 1960s, and the "bachelor pad" beckons.

Recognize the scene? If you're a fan of TV shows and movies set in the swingin' '60s, it should strike a resonant chord. Forget the storylines. For fans of mid-century modern, it's the picture-perfect stylistic depictions of the period that are the real attention-grabbers.

There's almost always a battle of the sexes going on. And the perfectly outfitted playing ground for that battle? The "bachelor pad."

It was, a far different time, with far different interpretations of the roles of men and women. The bachelor pad was where the single-young-man-on-the-move could indulge his cosmopolitan interests, before being subdued by suburbia. (The "bachelor girl pad" had to wait another decade or so for recognition, until Mary Tyler Moore first tossed her hat in the air.) Remember Pillow Talk? Rock Hudson lived in a bachelor pad. So did the Sean Connery incarnation of James Bond.

The bachelor pad reflected the owner's taste in art and furnishings—almost always minimalist modern—and was immaculately maintained. There were the necessary accouterments for suave entertaining: touch-of-a-button mood lighting; whopping glass or ceramic ashtrays; and, of course, a well-stocked bar.

Most important of all was the music. Although state-of-the-art, the pad's "hi-fi" system was determinedly unobtrusive. No unsightly wires. No metal boxes. The speakers and turntable (these were, remember, the all-vinyl days), artfully masqueraded as furniture.

The bachelor pad's record collection offered an eclectic assortment of music "for your listening, dancing, and romancing pleasure." There were soon-to-be jazz greats, crooners, and songbirds, plus those still in vogue from the 1950s; "easy listening" albums, which provided the perfect counterpoint to clinking glasses and tinkling conversation; "exotica", capitalizing on the popularity of faraway (really faraway) places; "party records" and other "hey-gang-you've-gotta-hear-this-one" oddities. . .plus, that only-of-its-time jawdropper, the "cheesecake album".

Yes, as the '60s dawned, advertisers made their periodic rediscovery: cheesecake sells. For the recording industry, this meant albums galore catering to the record-buying bachelor. Cover art presented a bevy of beauties, offering up their best versions of a come-hither glance. Whether the sultry songstress in question actually possessed any vocal talent was beside the point. Mamie Van Doren, Elke Sommer, Sophia Loren, and Diana Dors all cut albums; none are particularly well-remembered for their singing skills. Jayne Mansfield even tried her hand at a "classical" release, Shakespeare, Tchaikovsky & Me, breathlessly reciting poetry to the strains of classical music (sample: "How do I love thee?--sigh-- let me count the ways.").

And then there was Julie--Julie London, that is. Although possessing what she herself described as "a thimbleful of a voice," London's intimate vocalizations, (she called them "oversmoked"), proved ideal for the recording studio. From her initial hit, 1955's "Cry Me A River," London soared to the top of the bachelor's must-have list of recording artists. Adding to the allure: Julie's abundant red hair and languid good looks, always photographed to maximum effect on the covers of her 30-plus albums.

By the end of the decade, "torch singers" were tops. Their plaintive vocal laments ("Make The Man Love Me"; "The Thrill Is Gone") were accompanied by soulful, misty-eyed cover portraits. As record liner notes for Gogi Grant, one prominent practitioner, put it, "torch" offered "all the drama of unrequited love, the intimacy of smoldering passion, the poignancy of opportunity lost, and the pathos of utter loneliness. The fire, which has been kept carefully banked, is fanned into a flame of white-hot intensity." Whew!

Toning down those flames were

Above: "There's a swinging side to Nat." "Welcome To The Club," a jazz-influenced, big-band-backed released by Nat "King" Cole, one of the most popular crooners of the 1950s and '60s. $5-10.

Below: The pinup goes highbrow: Jayne Mansfield's "classical" release of the early 60s. "Shakespeare, Tchaikovsky & Me." $30-35.

Tiny dragonflies flew high on Tiffany lamps at Fontaine's auction

PITTSFIELD, MASS. — More than 150 pieces produced by Tiffany Studios led A Sept. 26-27 auction conducted by Fontaine's. These pieces helped drive the auction total to $5.325 million in sales. Table lamps, hanging lighting fixtures and leaded glass windows from the renowned maker were most desirable with seven lots hitting the six-figure mark.

"Our last few sales that feature Tiffany and fine art have all been strong sales and this one was right up there also with great material that brought out bidders by the droves on the phones, online and by absentee bid," said auctioneer and owner John Fontaine.

Tiffany's floral lamps are always popular and were well represented in this auction but standouts in the sale were three variants of its dragonfly lamps. Crossing the block within the first 15 minutes was the lamp that would achieve top-lot status: a circa 1910 Tiffany Studios dichroic Drophead Dragonfly table lamp that went well over estimate to attain $262,500. The 32-inch-tall lamp had a 22-inch diameter shade and a telescoping "Cat's Paw" base. A rare circa 1898 "Dragonfly" table lamp then sold a few minutes later at $225,000. To make this a trifecta, a circa 1905 Dragonfly table lamp then made $125,000.

"Dragonflies were one of Tiffany's most popular designs and we were fortunate enough to have three variations and the Drophead Dragonfly was just a stunner — it had everything you could ask for," Fontaine said.

Other Tiffany highlights that topped the $100,000 mark included a rare Turtleback Moorish lantern with a 33-inch drop that sold for $212,500, a Flowering Bouquet chandelier with a 28½-inch shade for $168,750 and an Oriental Poppy table lamp having a rare "Mud Turtle" base that earned $118,750.

Above: Topping the paintings category was this William H.D. Koerner oil on canvas painting, "Quit Your Kidding," that brought $30,000.

Fontaine's always has a strong selection of Tiffany Studios lamps but never shies away from fine lamps by other desirable makers, such as a Pairpoint Puffy Lilac table lamp that brought $37,500, an early 20th century Duffner & Kimberly Grape chandelier going out at $30,000 and a circa 1915 Handel scenic table lamp with a "Tree" base, which was

The Old West lives on with postcard collectors

BY LARRY LEMASTERS

Most Americans know something about the American Old West, which roughly lasted from the Louisiana Purchase in 1803 until the admission of the last western states, New Mexico and Arizona, in 1912.

The term "Old West" has imprecise boundaries and varying historical definitions. Still, historians and collectors both speak about the "spirit of the Old West," and most Americans agree the spirit of the Old West is still "alive and kickin'" in the history, stories, biographies, and mythology surrounding the settlement of the western states. While no one event captures all of the Old West's spirit, one event comes close — the Gunfight at the O.K. Corral.

Contrary to some of the movie depictions of this historic gunfight, the Gunfight at the O.K. Corral lasted just 30 seconds, leaving three men dead and several more wounded. No one counted, but legend has it that 30 bullets were fired in 30. As Virgil Cole once said, "Everybody could shoot."

The Gunfight at the O.K. Corral took place on Oct. 26, 1881, in Tombstone, Ariz. This gunfight pitted the Earp brothers (Virgil, Morgan, and Wyatt) along with Doc Holiday against the decorated by John Bailey. The latter easily left its $4/6,000 estimate behind to climb to $27,500.

Sterling silver continues to soar at auctions in value and desirability and sure to make a statement in a dining room is the early 20th century sterling silver centerpiece with a nautical theme that brought $125,000 ($50/75,000). Generously proportioned at 15 by 40½ by 20 inches, the centerpiece was in the form of a ship having a horse figurehead, scrollwork and nautical nymphs. Another sparkling addition to the sale was a R. Wallace & Sons “Irian” sterling silver flatware set comprising 214 pieces that made $25,000.

Fontaine’s has earned a following also for leaded glass windows, particularly Tiffany Studios examples. A circa 1910 Tiffany Studios Gosling memorial window, “Boy David Holding Harp,” had provenance to St. Mary’s Episcopal Church, Wayne, Pa., so a churchgoer there likely commissioned Tiffany’s to make this window. The window achieved $68,750, well within estimate. Far overtaking its estimate, however, was a pair of leaded glass tree and floral windows, that was attributed to William Morris ($5/7,500), which sold for $35,000.

Paintings were highly curated and the compact selection ranged from a William H.D. Koerner oil on canvas painting, “Quit Your Kidding,” depicting a group seated around a campfire after a hunt, at $30,000 to Guy Wiggins’ “Park Avenue, Winter,” that earned $27,500.

Rounding out the auction and each selling for $25,000 was a circa 1902 oak Gustav Stickley and Grueby Faience Co. “Twelve-Tile” table and a pre-Mayan 18K gold Lambayeques (Sicáns), 700-1200 CE. There were over 80 pieces of fine jewelry in the auction featuring a pair of 14K gold & 4.38 carat diamond stud earrings bringing $17,500 and a 14K gold, alexandrite & diamond link bracelet selling for $18,750.

Cowboys (Ike and Billy Clanton, Tom and Frank McLaury, and Billy Claiborne). The Cowboys were a loose association of outlaws living in Pima and Cochise Counties in Arizona.

The Gunfight at the O.K. Corral symbolically represented many opposing, moral factions, such as good vs. evil, law vs. lawless, modernism vs. past, right vs. wrong, and Wyatt Earp vs. everybody he doesn't like. The reality is, this gunfight was probably inevitable as modern society pushed its way against a lawless frontier.

A few interesting and little known facts about the gunfight: First, both Ike Clanton and Billy Claiborne fled from the fight without firing a shot, proving that Ike was more mouth than hero. The three outlaws who stood their ground and fought were all killed. Second, The "O.K." stands for "Old Kindersley," and the corral was originally a small horse corral. Third, the gunfight did not take place inside the O.K. Corral. The shoot-out actually took place in a vacant lot next to Camillius Fly's Photography

Studio on Freemont Street.

The name "Gunfight at the O.K. Corral" became a popular expression for this gunfight due to the 1957 movie The Gunfight at the O.K. Corral, starring Burt Lancaster as Wyatt Earp. Prior to this movie, the shootout was most often referred to as "the street fight in Tombstone," which lacks the flair associated with The Gunfight at the O.K.

Left: Vintage, O.K. Corral postcard from Tombstone, Ariz. The back of this postcard is signed "William H. Bonney," who died before the events at the O.K. Corral happened. This postcard was offered on eBay for $110.

Corral, especially when Tombstone was seeking to attract tourists. Finally, The Gunfight at the O.K. Corral is widely regarded by historians as the most famous shootout in all of the Old West, indicating that from this gunfight forward, the Old West was in decline and its days were numbered.

Right: From the 1940s, this vintage O.K. Corral RPPC postcard shows a sign describing the Earp-Clanton fight. This postcard is valued at $20.

Clanton, Tom McLaury, and Frank McLaury. Following the gunfight, these young outlaws were dressed in their finest Sunday-go-to-meeting clothes and laid out for town folks to see. In rather macabre fashion, townspeople enjoyed having their photos taken with the dead outlaws.

As the Old West was dying, circa 1912, postcards were just being created. Today, many western collectors focus their collections on postcards, and there are still a lot of Old West postcards waiting for collectors on secondary markets.

Finding O.K. Corral postcards may take some extra patience and time, but they are out there.

'60s Music

recordings intended for easier listening, providing just the right subtle background atmosphere when the whole gang got together. There were the guy groups (The Ames Brothers, The Four Freshmen, and oh so many more), and jazz-influenced crooners, including Nat “King” Cole and Sammy Davis, Jr. Ready to roll up the rug for a bit of pre-“Twist” dancing? Old favorites like Eddy Howard, The Three Suns (“Mamie Eisenhower’s favorite recording group”), “Wayne King, The Waltz King,” and “Lawrence Welk and his Champagne Music” (“equally fitting whether your party is for two dozen or simply two”), were just a platter-drop away. And, when it was time to simply sit back, listen, and enjoy, there were plenty of options: the hot swing of Louis Prima and Keely Smith. . .the “adventurous jazz” of Stan Kenton. . .and Harry Belafonte’s West Indies-seasoned folk songs. Cover art often focused on romanticized renditions of these performers, such as Belafonte’s billowy-sleeved shirts with down-to-there necklines.

Other covers featured exuberant, bachelor-pad partygoers, dressed to the nines. No Nehru jackets here. For the men, skinny ties and elegantly tailored suits. For the ladies, form-flattering cocktail dresses, beehive hairdos, lethal-looking stiletto heels, and sparkling jewelry aplenty. When it came to a bachelor pad party, guests put in an effort.

Then there were the icebreakers: “party records,” those oddities guaranteed to get the guys and gals talking. Sophisticates Above: “She holds all degrees of adult understanding, none in understatement.” The riotous, risqué Rusty Warren’s signature album,, “Knockers Up!,” a “party record” staple. $10-15.

reveled in the self-effacing stammer of rising young comic, Bob Newhart, and his “button-down mind.” Somewhat further down on the party record good taste scale was Rusty Warren (aka “the Knockers Up gal”). Rusty’s racy songs and blush-inducing comedy routines had their intended effect, eliciting plenty of nervous giggles. Of course, Rusty’s listeners knew exactly what they were getting into: her spicy array of album titles also included Sin-Sational and Sexplosion. (Rusty, by the way, began her career as a teacher at the New England Conservatory of Music.) “Specialty” albums were pulled out simply for their oh-my-gosh entertainment value. Ancient Incan culture was celebrated by Yma Sumac “the voice of the Xtabay.” Yma’s four-octave-plus vocal register ranged from a husky baritone to a twittering birdlike soprano (sometimes weirdly combined in a unique “double voice” effect). Although Yma’s bio billed her as “a descendant of the last of the Incan kings,” who “spent her childhood talking with the birds, the beasts, the winds,” there were doubters. Was she really just, as some claimed, quirky-voiced Brooklyn housewife Amy Camus? (That’s “Yma Sumac” spelled backwards.) No matter what you believed, Yma and her “spellbinding” voice made for interesting party chatter.

It’s easy to chuckle over what now seems camp. But during the swingin’ ’60s, these records were what America was buying. They accurately reflect the tastes

Below: “America’s number one song and fun team,” Louis Prima & Keely Smith, recorded live at Wilbur Clark’s Desert Inn Hotel, Las Vegas. $5-10.

Above: “The natives regard her as a reincarnation of Xtabay, lovely and mysterious woman of Incan legend”. Well, you be the judge. The freakishly varied vocals of Yma Sumac, the height of bachelor pad exotica, on “The Voice Of The Xtabay.” $15-20.

These days, vinyl is once again “in.” So, you see a carton of old albums, stop and take a moment to see what whets your interest. It might be a catchy cover, a surprising singer, or simply an aural oddity. While some rarities fetch more, most of these vintage recordings are well within the $25-and-under range. Shell out the dollar or so that these soundbite souvenirs of the ‘60s generally command, and guess what? You’re well on your way to outfitting that bachelor (or bachelor girl) pad. Cool!
